PROBERS THREATEN LAWSON WITH JAIL

RAYMOND DEFIES LEGISLATIVE INVESTIGATORS

"Investigating."

STARTLING NEW FACTS MAY RESCUE TUCKER

DR. HARRIS, IT IS SAID, HAS OTHER IMPORTANT THINGS TO TELL ABOUT CASE.

Following the sensation produced by the statement of Medical Examiner Francis A. Harris that Charles Louis Tucker's knife could not have made the wounds that caused the death of Mabel Page, which is a direct contradiction of the testimony he gave at the trial at which the young man was convicted, came the equally startling assertion to-day by James H. Vahey, of counsel for Tucker, in which he says that Harris has not divulged a quarter of what he knows about the case, and if he did it would "make your hair stand on end."

It is the general belief that this eleventh hour development is one of the most mystifying murders that ever took place in New England will have some important bearing on the action of Governor Guild when he considers the monster petition to save the life of the condemned boy.

Has Other Evidence.

This petition, it is estimated, contains about 75,000 signatures. The clerks in the offices of Vahey, Innes & Mansfield began the count of the names to-day and the preparation of the petition for removal to the State House, where it will be taken on Monday. It is not expected that the hearing on the petition will take place until early in the week after next.

In addition to the evidence of Dr. Harris, Mr. Vahey says that he has other evidence of the most important character, and Governor Guild, through Attorney General Malone, has arranged to have this heard and passed on by Judges Sheldon and Sherman, the judges who presided at the Tucker trial, one week from to-day. All the judges can do is to communicate to the Governor their opinion of the value of the new evidence as it has a bearing on the result of the trial.

The hearing to follow at the State House will be one of the most heated controversies, it is believed, that ever took place on Beacon Hill. Former Attorney-General Herbert Parker, who prosecuted Tucker, will be at the hearing, and it is expected that he will, if the occasion seems to demand it, reveal information in his possession that has come to him since the trial of Tucker.

Lawyer James H. Vahey, who defended Tucker, will meet the former Attorney-General in a final clash for the life of his client with an intensity of feeling that he did not show even at the trial.

Medical men who differed at the trial on vital point in the case, including Medical Examiner Harris, who has changed his mind about the testimony he gave, will also be present and speak.

Some of the new testimony that Mr. Vahey says he wants to present, it is believed, comes from other witnesses who testified for the State and now, like Dr. Harris, have concluded that they were mistaken.

One of the strongest witnesses for the State, Dr. Edward S. Wood, the famous blood expert, is beyond recall as a witness. He died last year.

Some of the jurors who found Tucker guilty, it is expected, will be at the hearing. Several of them, interviewed by the BOSTON AMERICAN, declare that they are still convinced that Tucker is guilty, and that Dr. Harris's change of mind has not affected their opinion.

Private Autopsy Held.

That Medical Examiner Harris not only arrived at the conclusion that the knife presented by the government was not the knife that killed Mabel Page, but at a private autopsy demonstrated it, it was reported to-day.

This autopsy, it was said, was held several months ago in Boston.

The body experimented on was said to be that of a woman about Mabel Page's age, and a knife as near like Tucker's as was possible to obtain was used.

At the conclusion of the experiment Dr. Harris is said to have emphatically declared to all present that Tucker's knife could not have been the weapon used to slay the Page woman.

For details of latest news in the Tucker case see Page 3.

MRS. BEMIS MAY BE JAILED TILL AUGUST

WORCESTER, May 19.—A peculiar tangle of legal red tape has been woven about Mrs. Myra Bemis of Barre, now before the Grand Jury on suspicion of having poisoned John Hammond, her hired man, on "Mystery Farm," and the result may keep Mrs. Bemis in jail until August, whether or not she is indicted.

To-day the grand jury is deliberating upon the case, having reopened it yesterday and worked at it up to 6 o'clock. The evidence was closed on Friday last, but to-day District Attorney Taft asked permission of Judge Gaskell to have the grand jury reconsider.

District Attorney Taft has also received permission from Judge Walker of Barre to hold the woman until next Tuesday, regardless of what the Grand Jury may report. Judge Walker had two weeks ago set the date for a hearing of the Bemis case for to-day at Barre.

Under the present condition of affairs Mrs. Bemis will be tried in the Barre Court on Tuesday next, should the action of the present Grand Jury reports, to see if she shall be held for the August Grand Jury. Under ordinary circumstances, should the Grand Jury return no bill to-day, Mrs. Bemis would be free.

Thomas H. Sullivan, attorney for Mrs. Bemis, is disappointed at the turn of affairs. Said he to-day:

"I expected the Grand Jury to report no indictment, and was preparing to request her liberty at 11:30 o'clock. Now I am asked. This is an outrage and persecution on my client. She will be locked up until August."

Boston Merchant Declines to Go Before Committee Unless Accompanied by His Lawyer—Financier Called Early Before Investigators.

Thomas W. Lawson, for an hour and twenty-five minutes before the star chamber investigation of legislative bribery charges to-day was threatened by the committee with thirty days in jail if he refused to answer all their questions.

"We'll settle that right now, then," said Mr. Lawson. "I'll take the thirty days, but I will only answer such questions before this committee as I wish to answer."

Mr. Lawson reiterated his statement that seventy members of the House were bribed or promised a bribe, and that $70,000 had been spent to defeat the anti-bucket shop bill.

He said he would tell what he knew to the grand jury.

George J. Raymond, the Boston merchant who offered a reward of $1,000 for evidence in the legislative bribery scandal, and whose offer was so worded that members of the House of Representatives wanted to hale him before the bar of the House for contempt, formally refused to appear before the Committee on Rules to-day unless his attorney and stenographer were allowed to be present in the room with him.

He appeared at the State House at 10:40, accompanied by his attorney, Henry D. Yeaton, and from the corridor sent a letter to the committee, stating his position.

LAWSON EXAMINED.

Mr. Raymond remained outside the room awaiting a reply to his communication, while the committee proceeded with the examination of Thomas W. Lawson.

"I have notified the committee," said Mr. Raymond, "that I refuse to accept the summons unless allowed my constitutional rights. The committee has not been sworn to secrecy. It is not a grand jury. Any person summoned before it under these conditions has a right to be attended by counsel and a stenographer.

"There is another reason that I might give for my refusal. Five of the members of the committee are under suspicion, and have no moral right to sit during this investigation."

Thomas W. Lawson, who was summoned yesterday, appeared at the State House before 10 o'clock. He was accompanied by a stenographer, and said before he entered the committee room that he should request the committee to allow him to have his stenographer present. He intimated, however, that he might not insist on his constitutional rights in the matter, and might testify even in the event of a refusal on the part of the committee.

Mr. Lawson was called at 10:06 o'clock. He at once passed into the room and remained with the committee until 11:30, his stenographer remained in the corridor.

Following is Mr. Raymond's letter to the committee:

To the Honorable Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives.

Gentlemen—Without waiving any legality in your summons to and service on me to appear before you to give evidence, etc., to-day, I before you I am at the door of your room ready to answer such questions as you may see fit to ask me, providing my counsel and stenographer are present.

I am advised by counsel that under the order under which you are acting, as stated in your summons directed to me, I have the constitutional right to have my counsel present to advise me, as you have not made known to me what questions you will require me to answer, and in view of this fact I am entitled to have present at such examination counsel to advise me as to my legal and constitutional rights.

I am further advised by my counsel that said order under which you are acting, as well as the constitution of the Commonwealth, does not give you authority to compel me to answer your questions in secret and without the presence of my counsel, and where I cannot have every word I say taken down for my own protection, and that any order by your committee or the House to compel me so to do deprives me of rights guaranteed me by the constitution of this Commonwealth and the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Therefore, unless my counsel and stenographer can be present I respectfully decline to enter your room and give evidence as requested in your summons directed to me, and pray the judgment of the House of Representatives whether it will order me to give evidence without the presence of counsel and my stenographer for the purpose aforesaid.

Stricken With Heart Failure Early To-day

POPE FELL IN FAINT

Dr. Lapponi, Vatican Physician, Hastily Called, Gave Restoratives and Pontiff Revived.

ROME, May 19.—The Pope was stricken with sudden attack of heart failure this morning, and Dr. Lapponi, the Vatican physician, was hurriedly summoned.

He administered restoratives, after which the Pope revived. Dr. Lapponi has ordered that His Holiness must take a complete rest.

All his engagements for the next few days have been cancelled.

The Pontiff's condition, while not alarming, is causing his entourage uneasiness. His Holiness is also suffering from gout. Thursday the malady stricken him in the right knee. Notwithstanding his illness he received a number of Dominican friars in audience that day.

The attack of heart failure to-day is not in itself dangerous, but the Pontiff is run down generally because of overwork.

The Pope will probably remain in bed until the middle of next week. He had promised to attend to-morrow the ceremony of the beatification of the Dominican martyrs who lost their lives in Tonquin, but this engagement has been cancelled with the others.

MISSED FREEDOM FOR EXERCISE

The condition of Pope Pius X., while not alarming, had given his physician, Dr. Lapponi, much to desire in the way of improvement for his patient. As cardinal Sarto the Pope was accustomed to take an unusual amount of exercise, and since his elevation to the chair of St. Peter he has missed keenly the freedom to which he was accustomed and the long rambles in which he delighted.

For over a year from time to time the Christian world has been alarmed by the news from Rome regarding the Pope's condition.

On November 14, 1904, it was reported that His Holiness had been seized with an alarming attack of heart failure. Dr. Lapponi at once stated that there was nothing in the Pope's condition to give such alarm, as the Pontiff was suffering from an attack of indigestion, to which he had been more or less subject ever since going to the Vatican.

2 PROSTRATED ON THE HOTTEST DAY OF YEAR

VICTIMS OF HEAT IN SERIOUS CONDITION AT THE CITY HOSPITAL.

Two prostrations due to heat marked to-day as the hottest day of the year. Both of the victims are in serious condition.

Daniel Daley of No. 218 Columbus avenue was overcome near the Columbus avenue armory at 7:30 a. m. and fell to the sidewalk unconscious. It was an hour before he was brought to his senses. He was taken first to the house of Dr. Frederick Kingsley, No. 212 Columbus avenue, and then to his own home.

Walter Kelley, twenty-three years old, was found unconscious in a doorway at No. 1,070 Washington street, at 10 o'clock. His condition is serious. He was taken to the City Hospital.

"Fair and cooler" is the forecast by the officials of the Weather Bureau, but no relief from the torrid wave is due until after midnight to-night. To-morrow will be much cooler, a fall of 20 degrees being expected before to-morrow morning. The mercury may drop to the fifties.

Not a city on the Atlantic Coast reports a temperature below 70 degrees. Boston is the second hottest city in the United States to-day, Philadelphia recording two degrees higher temperature.

The whole Atlantic seaboard is affected by the mid-Summer temperature, but to the westward delightful weather conditions obtain, and these are due here within twenty-four hours.

Ice is being made in Ontario and the Northwest provinces, as the temperature is below the freezing point, while snow is falling in Marquette and Houghton, Mich.

Last Sunday held the record until the mercury in the government tubes showed the local official observer that it was climbing several degrees higher than it did six days ago.

After a long, hot, sticky, sweltering night, the people of Boston were hoping this morning for relief, but that hope was apparently in vain, for the wind shifted to the southwest, whence comes no relief at this season of the year.

The temperature will climb steadily to-day, but how long and how high the forecaster would not hazard.

This is an unusually hot May 19, as the official figures in the weather bureau show. It is felt all the more severely just now because of the cool weather which has preceded the torrid wave, which is sweeping from the West over New England.

LAWSON TELLS HOW TO REVEAL BRIBERY

in which a perfunctory examination of thirty-five witnesses was conducted, it is freely stated developed absolutely nothing.

One Minute Hearings.

In many cases the witnesses were not before the committee longer than two minutes and several came out almost in less than sixty seconds.

Toward the close of the afternoon, with the wheels of the investigation well oiled and the members of the committee nodding in their chairs, one of Thomas W. Lawson's unpleasantly pungent letters was handed to Speaker Cole by Mr. Lawson's private secretary. His summons before the committee followed as a direct request to give the solons the benefit of his knowledge.

At 6 o'clock last night, as Mr. Lawson emerged from his State street office, he received a summons to appear before the committee, which he took with a smile of apparent satisfaction.

In addition to his letter to Speaker Cole, Mr. Lawson also addressed a letter to Governor Guild yesterday, again urging that the Governor in a special message to the Legislature, request the passage of the bull-bucket shop bill.

It is stated that one of the witnesses before the committee in the latter part of the afternoon was responsible for the injection of the Stock Exchange officials into the investigation. That individual, it is whispered, told the committee that he had heard each member of the Stock Exchange had been assessed to pay the expenses of defeating the bucket shop bill.

LAWSON TELLS HOW TO DISCOVER BRIBERY FACTS

Publicity in investigating the bribery scandal is the legislative committee is advised by Thomas W. Lawson in a characteristic letter addressed to the chairman of that committee. Mr. Lawson places himself at the disposal of the committee if his services are desired, but remarks that he does not anticipate such a contingency. His letter is as follows:

May 18, 1906.

To the Chairman of the Committee to Expose Massachusetts Legislative Bribery, State House, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir—As a citizen of Massachusetts I read with interest and frantic haste the statement that your committee intended to investigate thoroughly the bribery committed at or in connection with the State House, and that your committee desired the assistance of all citizens of the State in its efforts to attain its end, namely, stomach-pumping legal boluses to send to that institution at the base of the monument made famous in song and story by our ancestors' brave acts, the member or members of the Massachusetts Legislature who were bargained with and those wretches who bargained with them.

To that end I respectfully suggest that you call before your committee and examine under oath—the "truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" oath—in public on the point so that all others having knowledge that perjury is being committed while on the perjury is in that molten state necessary to re-shaping, may blue print such perjury to your committee while it is yet in session.

First—The bucket shop men who hired the four men to procure the twenty odd votes out of $1400 per vote.

Second—The lobbyists who bought and paid for votes upon other measures.

Third—The officers of certain corporations, with books showing the expenditures of money and trapbinetcrings used in vote buying.

Fourth—The four men with their lists of bargainable members.

Fifth—The last man on one of the lists, the one who refused to sell, and the first man on the list, the Weldons, 4004-5 passed-and-signed, midnight-bill man.

Sixth—

Seventh—The member or members who were indicted by the Grand Jury.

Eighth—Certain members of your own—but I will not go further with my suggestions as to the individuals having real knowledge—legal knowledge—of this bribery, as it is patent to all in the "know" just whom you should bring before your committee, provided, of course, your committee is grub-digging.

If, as is rumored, your committee is seeking campaign material to offset the inevitable results of the District Attorney's real investigation, my suggestions will be of little value.

Should your committee desire any communication with me, which I do not suppose is probable, I trust you will find it to your convenience to let me know at my office to-day, as my business or other affairs may like me out of the State during the next two or three weeks.

Believe me, yours truly,

(Signed) THOMAS W. LAWSON.

Son of World's Richest Man Chooses "Pitch Pine Hall" to Shelter Heir.

Special to the Boston American.

BEVERLY, May 19.—With scores of pretty Summer homes to select from along the North shore, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., son of the wealthy richest man, has chosen the quaint and pretty villa, "Pitch Pine Hall," owned by Otis H. Luke, on Juniper street, at Beverly Farms.

This estate is one of the prettiest along the North shore and commands a beautiful view of the ocean and country. The house is of colonial architecture, with broad verandas and closely screened piazzas. Well kept lawns surround the house, which is reached by winding driveways shaded by large pine trees and bordered by gardens of choice flowers.

A large stable in the rear of the house has accommodations for several horses, but it is said Mr. Rockefeller will use it solely as a garage for his automobiles.

It is probable that there will be scores of distinguished visitors at this mansion during the coming season, and no doubt the "Oil King" himself will be a frequent visitor.

Its isolated location and the healthfulness of the locality are said to be the reasons Mr. Rockefeller as the home for the world's richest baby during the Summer months. It was occupied by the Costello C. Conress last year and by Senator Philander C. Knox, formerly attorney-general of the United States, during the season of 1905. Mr. Rockefeller is expected about the middle of June.

HEARST FUND FOR FRISCO NOW IS $255,374.67

Greatest Newspaper Subscription in History of the World Raised Month After Quake.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK May 19.—The American Journal San Francisco Relief Fund has passed the quarter of a million dollar mark and at midnight the figures were $255,374.67. A month ago the fire sweep of the San Francisco disaster was licked into the American office over the telegraph wires and within two hours, despite the meagre details, the dispatches made it clear that an American city had been burned, and that the American people were going on trial before the entire nations of the world.

How necessary was instantaneous action was understood by The New York American, and this paper, while San Francisco people still were fleeing from the flames, organized the American Journal fund.

Telegrams to Mayors.

William R. Hearst communicated with some of the most prominent men in New York and other cities, suggesting that contributions be forwarded at once. To the mayors of innumerable cities telegrams were sent asking them to start funds, which hundreds of thousands of dollars, which did not actually come in the American Journal fund but were sent by mayors direct to San Francisco, were also started.

It is no exaggeration to say that fifty per cent of the entire relief work done throughout the country was started by these telegrams, and the American's one place was to carry on the work in the most expeditious manner. As a newspaper it realized that it could not undertake the entire work, but those who were placed in charge of the fund determined, in addition to stirring up the whole country, to make the fund actually collected, handled and disposed of the greatest newspaper fund in the history of the world.

To-day's figures speak for themselves. And the best of it is that there is more money in sight. It is a newspaper achievement that will stand out for decades. The persons who responded so nobly to the call in the name of humanity were not all rich; they were not all poor. Everyone forgot everything except that there were Americans who needed the help of Americans. Millionaires and those who live in tenements were both plentiful in the first day's list of contributors. Money came from every source.

Rich and Poor Responded

Theatrical managers at once notified the AMERICAN of benefit performances they would give, although as business men they realized that they were practically ruining the end of the theatrical season.

Performers of every description gave money and their services, the leading stars, the best vaudeville artists and those in more humble positions all did their best.

LAST OF SUGAR REBATERS ARE NOW ARRAIGNED

New York Central, American Sugar Refining Company and Edwin Earle at Bar.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The preliminary arraignment of the last of the sugar rebaters, uncovered by the investigation made by William Randolph Hearst was made yesterday, when Edwin Earle, a wealthy Detroit wholesale sugar merchant, appeared before Judge Thomas in the Circuit Court and gave bail in the sum of $10,000 for his appearance on May 24. Earle was proceeded to the bar of justice by the New York Central Railroad Company and by the American Sugar Refining Company, as conspirators, and by Vice-President Guilford, Traffic Manager F. L. Pomeroy and by Earle's own partner, Co. Goodier Edgar.

The fight to keep these officials and retaining merchants out of jail on the conspiracy charge which formed the basis of one of the seven indictments handed down by the April federal grand jury will be as bitter as the local courts have ever seen. The most skilful legal talent at the command of the corporations has been retained.

Seeking Points on Which to Demur.

Half a dozen attorneys are now digging through law books looking for points on which they may demur. Every possible delay will be resorted to and in case of adverse decisions appeals will be taken to the higher courts.

United States District Attorney Stimson has several deputies at work on the case. He went over the evidence thoroughly when it was before the grand jury and he is confident the rebaters will be punished. Attorney General Moody has been personally interested in the cases ever since Mr. Hearst first went to him with the evidence. Every possible assistance will be given the local officer from Washington.

Mr. Earle was in a terrible hurry yesterday. The task of pleading to the several indictments which bear his name was not pleasing to him and he seemed anxious to get it over as soon as possible. At his special request he had been given a longer time in which to plead than the other men who were indicted, but these few days of grace will not put off his trial.

Entered Plea in a Minute.

The Detroit merchant reached the post office building as soon as did Judge Thomas yesterday morning. His case was called immediately, and it took him but a minute to enter his plea.

Accompanied by United States Marshal Henkel, he hurried to United States Commissioner Shields' office and gave a surety bond of $10,000, which had already been arranged for him by the Illinois Surety Company. Like the others indicted for sugar rebating, he refused to discuss the case.

ATHOL WOMAN SHOT BY HUSBAND, DEAD

ATHOL, May 19.—Mrs. Frank A. Aldrich, who was shot at South Bend, Ind., a short time ago by her husband, a former Athol boy, died yesterday of her wounds.

Aldrich took to drinking to such excess that his wife refused to live with him and went to South Bend, where she had relatives. Aldrich followed her there.

DORCHESTER TO GET A NEW FIRE HOUSE

Commissioner Wells announces that he hopes to place a new ladder house on Lawrence avenue, Dorchester, near the corner of Savin Hill avenue. The commissioner will erect the Laurel avenue section yesterday and decided that the land owned by the city fronting on the avenue would make a suitable site.

WANDERING WOMAN IS FOUND, SAFE

HAVERHILL, May 19.—Mrs. John Burkel, who was taken with a fit of insanity during a trolley ride here, was yesterday found at the State Hospital in Tewksbury, where she had been placed after being found wandering. The four children, who were with her, were at first sent to the Cheshire Street home in Boston, and later to Tewksbury. The local police were told about the wanderings and yesterday Mr. Burkel went to Tewksbury and brought his wife and children home. She is still ill.

LIVE WIRE KILLS LINEMAN

SOUTH NORWALK, Ct., May 19.—James Kelly, aged nineteen, a lineman employed by the local trolley company, was electrocuted yesterday by coming in contact with a wire which carried 2,200 volts of electricity.

SCORES DIE, $2,000,000 LOSS IN FOREST FIRE

RAGING FLAMES COVER 200 MILES IN WOODS OF NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Special to the Boston American.

ESCANABA, Mich., May 19.—Scores of lives are believed to have been lost, eight towns have been destroyed, and seven Summer tourist resorts were wiped out by a raging forest fire that already has consumed $2,000,000 worth of timber and is still eating a terrific path of devastation in the Northern Michigan woods.

Already the burned area covers 200 square miles, and within this area, it is feared, many persons have been cut off in their efforts to escape.

Towns Lost and in Peril.

These towns are reported destroyed or in peril:

Talbot, twenty-five miles north of Menominee, 300 population, wiped out. Quinnesec, 1,000 population, reported to be on fire. Saunders, in Iron county, swept by flames: loss of life reported. Shaffer, in Dickinson county, wiped out; loss of life reported. Daggett, fire within half a mile and burning toward the town; no word this morning. Powers, reported to be in danger; fire only short distance away. Ralph, north of Escanaba, 400 population, destroyed; Salvole, north of Escanaba, 200 population, wiped out; Cornell, north of Escanaba, 500 population, wiped out. Woodhaven, north of Escanaba, 200 population, wiped out.

Hundreds of people are homeless and are coming to Escanaba as fast as trains can be sent to the burned area.

DYNAMITE EXPLODES, SILVER TOWN DOOMED TO DESTRUCTION

CORALT, Ont., May 19. This wonderful silver mining town will probably be entirely destroyed by fire. An explosion of dynamite took place which was like an earthquake. Seven and a half tons exploded. The shed had caught fire from a little shack that was in flames. Twenty-five houses were destroyed at once by the explosion. Twenty-five more are now destroyed by the flames. It is almost impossible to fight the fire for lack of appliances. Dozens of men, women and children were by the debris and falling glass.

FLORAL HOOK FOR GIRL SINGER

Miss Ethel Fernandez, a pianist and singer who made her debut as an amateur at the Columbia last night, was the star of the entertainment, and undistanced as aspirant for honors seen at that theatre this season. A floral "hook" was handed to her over the footlights as a reward. The pretty winners, beside Miss Fernandez, were George Russell in the adult class and the Turner brothers, Georgie Mack and Ernest McDonald in the juvenile class.

FIGHT TO KEEP TUG AFLOAT

Standing in water up to his waist and feeding the furnace under the boilers with kerb fittings and any pieces of wood he could reach, Engineer R. M. Emerson made a plucky fight to keep enough steam in his engines to get the tug Flora to a wharf yesterday before sinking. He succeeded, but gave too soon, for the water had put out the fires in one set of grates and the coal bunkers were flooded.

By using wood and oil-soaked waste, the steam was kept up and the boat reached Commercial wharf. A good-sized hole two inches below the waterline was found. The Flora is in command of Captain Clinton Chase, and is engaged as a water boat. It is supposed she struck a submerged timber.

PERKINS TO QUIT N. Y. LIFE

NEW YORK, May 19.—It was practically admitted yesterday by several trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company that George W. Perkins will not be renominated for re-election as a trustee and will retire from the company next fall, when the annual election takes place.

This report created great interest in Wall street, as the retirement of Mr. Perkins would completely sever the close ties which have existed for years between J. P. Morgan & Co. and the New York Life.

R. I. DEMOCRATS OPEN CAMPAIGN

PAWTUCKET, R. I., May 19.—As in past years, the Democrats of this city will fire the first gun of the approaching campaign when a big registration rally will be held to-morrow in the Smith building. The meeting has been called by Edward Butler, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, and while the citizens will be advised to register, a business meeting will be held, when plans for the coming campaign, when full power to elect a Senator and six Representatives who will be favorable to the candidacy of Colonel H. I. Goddard, who was nominated by the Independents and endorsed by the Democrats last week in Providence, will be discussed.

TWO U. S. SENATORS ARE SERIOUSLY ILL

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 19.—Senator Fred T. Dubois of Idaho, who has been ill for three days, is suffering from ptomaine poisoning, according to the diagnosis of his physician.

NEW EVIDENCE GIVEN GOVERNOR GUILD IN HEARING TO-DAY ON THE PETITON TO SAVE TUCKER FROM THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

250,000 ASK COMMUTATION FOR TUCKER

Chief Executive and His Council Hear Plea to Save the Boy's Life.

IMPORTANT NEW FACTS

The petition for the commutation of the death sentence of Charles L. Tucker to life imprisonment is ready to go before Governor Guild and his Council. This petition is one of the largest ever made in the State, and the largest of its kind ever drawn up. It contains about 250,000 names of those of prominent people in the Commonwealth.

Attorneys James H. Vahey and Charles H. Innes, counsel for Tucker during the trial, met the Governor and Attorney-General Malone yesterday, and talked over the procedure in the matter for the petition for commutation of Tucker's sentence.

A formal request for the commutation was presented in which it was stated, among other things, that they also wished to introduce some new evidence.

Governor Guild said that he had decided that if there was any new evidence he would refer it to the Judges who tried the case, Messrs. Vahey and Innes then stated that there was evidence that they wished to present. The Attorney General will take charge of the arrangements for the hearing before the court, which will probably take place the first of next week.

Whatever action Governor Guild may take on the strength of that petition, it is recognized that the statement of Medical Examiner Harris when laid before Justices Sherman and Sheldon may have an important bearing upon the whole question.

In speaking of the case last night, Mr. Vahey said: "Medical Examiner Harris displayed rare courage in admitting that he had erred in his testimony regarding the Tucker knife.

"The decision of Justices Sheldon and Sherman, to whom the counsellors' argument in the case of Mr. Harris has been referred, will be awaited before anything is done.

"And there is other new evidence which they will be called upon to consider. It is fully as important as the declaration of Medical Examiner Harris.

"To mention it at this time would close the mouths of the parties from whom we expect to come the testimony. Therefore I cannot furnish even an inkling for publication.

"Let me predict that the innocence of Charles L. Tucker will yet be proven."

WIFE ELOPES, HYPNOTIZED SAYS HUSBAND

Leominster Man Claims 18 Year-Old Mrs. Warren, Victim of Magnetism.

LEOMINSTER, May 19.—Charging that his wife was enticed away by hypnotic influence and that she was not aware of her own actions, Roswell Warren, a carpenter on the Fitchburg & Leominster Street Railroad, is seeking to locate Arthur S. Aikins of Leominster, who has eloped with pretty eighteen-year-old Mrs. Warren last week. Aikins is 40 years of age and has a wife here.

When Warren returned home from work last Saturday night he found his wife and a few valuables missing. Inquiry, he claims, revealed the fact that she had gone away with Aikins and that the two had taken separate trains for Worcester, where they later joined each other. The Worcester police have been called into the case and have traced a couple answering to the description of Aikins and Mrs. Warren in that city over Sunday.

Mrs. Aikins has filed a petition in the Superior Court asking for separate support from her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Warren have only been married a short time.

Aikins was a frequent visitor at the Warren house and the conductor now says that the man's eyes possessed a peculiar power of fascination of which his wife often spoke.

SAY CAMBRIDGE SUBWAY BILL IS GRAB OF MILLIONS

President Eliot and Public Franchise League Show It Means Gift of $3,600,000 to Elevated Road.

President Eliot of Harvard has joined in the fight against the grab of millions of dollars proposed by the Boston Elevated Railway Company, in connection with the Cambridge subway bill, which is now before the Legislature.

This bill would not only take from the city of Cambridge alone about $3,600,000, without any return, but would give the Elevated company locations for an elevated structure in Boston streets without any recompense, and would give them a free, revocable and perpetual right to cross the Charles on the new dam and all the other companies forever in the future from granting him competition.

Citizens of all classes, including many of the most prominent and conservative in Cambridge, are aroused against the plain grab of the bill, and would give them no privilege and no franchise except for a fair compensation to the company for assuming the business risk of building the subway. The other consideration to the company for giving up its permanent location for an elevated structure.

No compensation for the business risk is reasonably required, even aside from the free use of the location. The construction of a subway has ceased to be an experimental enterprise. Any business risk involved in such construction may fairly be set against the business risk which would be involved in constructing an elevated railway.

The real reason for exacting the payment of a bonus is the relinquishment of the elevated railway locations, for which the company has paid nothing. For such relinquishment, $3,600,000 as a cost estimated at $4,500,000 is grossly excessive.

Gives Location Free.

If the company now had no elevated railway location in Cambridge no such bargain would be suggested. The city not only gives the use of the location free from any rental, but guarantees the continuance of such use unless the city repays to the company all outlay as well as a large bonus.

Only two grounds can be suggested for paying any bonus as for giving the free use of the location. One is compensation to the company for assuming the business risk of building the subway. The other consideration to the company for giving up its permanent location for an elevated structure.

'NOT GUILTY," SAYS HAYES---ACQUITTED

Special to the Boston American.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., May 19.—The arraignment of Jerry Hayes on a warrant charging him with the murder of Mabel Page at Weston, Mass., occupied less than two hours today, and he was acquitted.

There was no evidence against Hayes, and several witnesses were present in his behalf, although they had not been summoned. Mrs. Margaret E. Brown, to whom Hayes made the statement that he was in the Page house at the time of the murder, and got out of the State before matters became hot for him, was not present.

It now appears that Judge Bachelder signed the warrant for Hayes's arrest without carefully reading it. It also appears that Sheriff Smith, who made the arrest, knew little of the matter except that the warrant declared Hayes was charged with murder.

Judge O. R. Bachelder read the warrant accusing Hayes, and then asked:

"Jerry Hayes, are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty," replied Hayes, quickly.

"You are discharged," responded the Court. Hayes walked out of the court a free man.

After the trial Hayes denied that he had ever told Mrs. Brown about being in the Page house. He said that he knew nothing of the Page murder except what he had read in the papers.

Before Hayes was brought into court Sheriff Smith, who had him in charge, received a telegram from James H. Vahey, Tucker's attorney in the Page case, directing him to use great care, as the matter was very important. Mr. Vahey said that he would have some one go to Skowhegan last night if the sheriff desired.

Sheriff Smith responded that he should not advise such action and that he would endeavor to have Hayes discharged.

NEW EVIDENCE STRONGEST YET

Attorney James H. Vahey is not discouraged by the acquittal of Jerry Hayes, the man charged with the Page murder case, although he confidently expected that it would mean something substantial in favor of Tucker. There was new evidence to been found by the lawyer, and it will be given to Governor Guild to-day at the hearing on the petition for commutation of Tucker's sentence.

What the new evidence is Mr. Vahey will not state. It is entirely separate from the statements made by Medical Examiner Harris, that the knife owned by Tucker could have made the wounds which caused the woman's death.

If the City of Cambridge wishes to purchase the subway at the end of twenty years it must pay the cost—$4,500,000, plus twenty years' interest thereon at eight per cent., amounting to $7,200,000, making a total of $11,700,000. From this is to be deducted the dividends for twenty years on only $2,000,000 of stock issued as aforesaid.

If the railroad continues to pay six per cent. dividends, the deduction will amount to $2,600,000 and will leave the net amount to be paid to the City of Cambridge to the railroad for the subway, $4,100,000.

If for any reason the railroad reduces its dividends upon six per cent., the amount to be deducted will be correspondingly less and the amount to be paid by the city correspondingly increased.

If we assume that the dividends will continue at six per cent. the city, if it buys the subway will have to pay the original cost of $4,500,000 with a bonus of $2,600,000, in addition to giving to the company free of rent, the location of the subway for twenty years.

"GOVERNMENT SHOULD FIX RAILWAY RATE"

—PRESIDENT CASSATT

Head of Pennsylvania Railroad System Declares He Believes It.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 19.—President A. J. Cassatt of the Pennsylvania railroad, the greatest railroad system in the world, has declared himself in favor of government regulation of railroad rates. His views on the subject were given in an authorized interview, shortly before Mr. Cassatt's departure for Europe.

Mr. Cassatt is known to have had many interviews with President Roosevelt, but his position on the matter has not been published for the first time. Mr. Cassatt says:

"I have for several years believed that the national government, through the Interstate Commerce Commission, ought to be in a position to fix railroad rates whenever the rates made by the railroads themselves are found, after complaint and hearing, to be unreasonable; provided, of course, that there shall be the right of appeal to the courts."

The astonishing revelation is made in the same article that, although John D. Rockefeller of the Standard Oil Trust created the power estate system, through the Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroads, the general managers of the system in recent years, was Andrew Carnegie, or the Carnegie Steel Company.

Upon assuming office the presidency seven years ago, Mr. Cassatt found that the greatest of reforms, so far as the company was concerned, was, not the Standard Oil Company, which now has the lion's share of its own, but Andrew Carnegie. His steel company, capitalized about $100,000,000 at steel and iron and other commodities over the Pennsylvania line every year.

Mr. Cassatt picked no favorites. He cut off Mr. Carnegie with the rest. Mr. Carnegie went to know Mr. Cassatt and protested and pleaded in vain. The President of the Pennsylvania company could not be bored. Then Mr. Carnegie grew angry and threatened to construct a line from the West through Pittsburg to the Atlantic seaboard that would destroy the primacy of the Pennsylvania system.

PHILADELPHIA SUICIDE LOOKS LIKE MUENTER

Comparison of Photograph With Face of Dead Man Leaves Little Doubt.

Chief Pullen of the Cambridge Police received no word to-day from the Philadelphia Police regarding the body of the unidentified man who committed suicide in the Colonade Hotel, and who is said to resemble Erich K. Muenter, the Harvard instructor, who is wanted on suspicion of wife-murder. As soon as anything definite is received, Chief Pullen will decide upon sending one of his men to Philadelphia to make a positive identification.

The body is at the city undertaker's rooms in Philadelphia. This morning, according to special dispatches from the BOSTON AMERICAN, a comparison of the dead man's features with a photograph of Muenter was made by Coroner Fernon, and the coroner and his attachees feel almost certain that the dead man is the missing Harvard instructor.

The hair, forehead, eyes, nose and cheek bones, as well as the formation of the ears, seemingly correspond to those of the photograph. The absence of the Vandyke and mustache, while disconcerting to the police, is regarded as a most natural precaution to avoid identification. A thorough examination of the shirt which bore the monogram "E. B. M." or "E. K. M." is being made, in order that the monogram may be deciphered.

JURORS DISREGARD HARRIS TESTIMONY

The jurors in the famous Tucker case seem to attach but little weight to Dr. Harris's latest testimony regarding the knife wounds. Dr. Harris now changes sides and declares that the wounds could only have been made by a single edged knife. Tucker's hunting knife had only one edge.

The following interviews with members of the Tucker jury explain the situation fully:

"The cut in the corsets showed that a square-edged knife was used. There was a black waist also shown, but I do not remember the cut in that," says Henry A. Towne of Somerville.

"Dr. Harris's statement would not make me change my views. The attorney for the defense tried to show that it was a double-edged knife that was used, but the jury did not take any stock in it. Of course, the Harris testimony had some effect on bringing in a verdict, but not altogether. The jury considered the condition of the sticking pin and other things, and the broken knife helped."

Tucker's Knife Might Do It.

"I am rather uncertain now of what Medical Examiner Harris testified, but as I recall it he was not so positive in his testimony as I thought he might be," said the Rev. W. V. Nason. "Other witnesses testified before him that the wounds in Mabel Page's body could have been made by a single edged blade. I am satisfied that they could. Further, the fact that bloodstained overalls could be found in the house broken it ought to be considered. Despite the change of opinion of Dr. Harris, I am convinced that Tucker's knife could have made the wounds and did.

"I regard Dr. Harris's explanation of how it was impossible to make those wounds with a single-edged blade as conjecture. There were other doctors who testified and I do not think the opinion of Dr. Harris after it has changed ought to outweigh theirs."

"The medical examiner's change of opinion is a conundrum to me. I have talked it over with him. His explanation is clear enough, but why he did not see it before I fail to understand. I consider it a very serious matter. If all the other doctors change their opinion the case would be in a pretty fix. That does not seem likely, and I am still of the belief that on the day the verdict of the jury was given," so said Arthur W. Warren, one of the jurors yesterday.

"I intend, however, to give the matter further consideration. I have already spent two days investigating new evidence, but I have found nothing so far to cause me to change my opinion.

"I considered Medical Examiner Harris an important witness regarding the evidence of the knife. He had plenty of time to study the case before he went on the witness stand. He was not the only

OPINIONS DIFFER ABOUT THE KNIFE

Medical Examiner Harris has sprung a big surprise in the Tucker case. Were the deadly strokes inflicted with a two or single edged knife? During the trial the latter theory prevailed, but now there is evidence that the wounds were made by a double edged and the famous Tucker hunting knife was single edged.

Dr. Harris' discovery has had the following effect on the Tucker jury. They state just what they think. As follows:

"We haven't changed the opinion I expressed at the Tucker trial," said Dr. Wood of Waltham. "Nothing has been brought to my attention which would cause a contrary statement. And I did not advance my theory without having carefully examined the Tucker knife and the wounds in the body of Mabel Page.

"I am sure in the division over which Dr. Harris has charge, and am in the dark as to the things which caused him to alter his evidence."

"I care nothing for the statements of Dr. Harris. And I do not wish to discuss the Tucker trial or the evidence I gave during the trial, which I again repeat, and that is all there is to it." This was the terse statement of Medical Examiner Mead.

(Note.—Here is Medical Examiner Mead's testimony given at the trial: "The wounds were made evidently by a strong knife, the blade coming to a point and being about five long. There was only one cutting edge."

"Dr. Harris's story is simply a substantiation of what I contended at the Tucker trial. My principal point was that the knife blade produced could not have caused the wounds," said Dr. Lockhart of Cambridge. "The single edge and the thick top eliminated the weapon.

"Both edges of the thrust wounds were exactly alike, showing that the knife used must have been double edged.

"It seems to me the division over which Dr. Harris has charge, and am in the dark as to the things which caused him to alter his evidence."

WOMAN KILLED SELF TO ESCAPE FROM NIHILISTS

London Suicide Thought to Be Boston Girl Now Said to Be Russian Spy.

LONDON, May 19.—The woman who committed suicide at Pindico March 16, and who at one time supposed to be Mrs. Laura Cushing of Boston, Mass., was Marie Devral, a Russian spy, who had been sentenced to death by Nihilists for betraying their secrets, according to the Paris correspondent of the Chronicle, who asserts that she fled from Russia to escape vengeance, and, after long wanderings in Europe and America, committed suicide in despair of avoiding fate.

It is said that she was of good family, and that her real name was Helen de Krebel. Some years ago she professed sympathy with the terrorists. Having revealed many plots, on one occasion, it is said, saving the Emperor's life, she fell under suspicion of the terrorists, who, to test her ability, forced her to carry out the execution of an official. She pretended to assist, but revealed the plot to the police and fled from Russia.

BOSTON GIRL MEETS WOMAN TENNIS CHAMPION FOR TITLE

Miss Marion Fenno of Longwood Plays Miss May Sutton To-day.

With the woman's tennis championship of the United States as the prize, Miss Marion Fenno of Longwood and Miss May Sutton, the international champion, met today on the courts at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Miss Fenno has won her way to the finals by hard, steady playing, and the great crowd that gathered under the big shade trees at Longwood anticipated a brilliant exhibition in the final match of the women's invitation tournament.

Miss Sutton has had little difficulty during the past three days in defeating her opponents in the singles. Miss Fenno, by defeating Miss Sears yesterday after a long, hard contest, earned the right to battle for the championship.

This afternoon Miss Sutton and Norman Talbot will play Miss Green of Philadelphia and N. W. Niles, the Harvard champion, in the mixed doubles.

The bringing of the two events into the final stage for to-day's playing was the chief feature of yesterday's work. A day of lauds such as is seldom seen here was given the spectators.

There is a possibility of a few exhibition games being played with Miss Sutton as a feature this afternoon.

Miss Sears, of Boston, met Miss Sutton in the semi-finals yesterday and made a very creditable showing. Although defeated, she made the champion play hard to win and succeeded in taking four games.

Miss Sutton also played an exhibition set with H. W. Niles and displayed form that surprised the spectators. She won, beaten 6-4, but was heartily applauded for her playing. Her defeat was due to the fact that she was unable to handle the Harvard player's fast service.

Snapshot of Miss May Sutton, champion woman tennis player, made on the Longwood court, where Miss Sutton has been doing some phenomenal playing this week.

HEROIC LAD SAVED BOY IN WATER; 1 LOST

Twelve-Year-Old McGilligary Rescued Chum, but Latter's Little Brother Is Drowned.

While bathing in an inlet at Prescott street, near Prescott Beach, at 10 a. m. today, seven-year-old George Schwandt of No. 165 Putnam street, East Boston, was drowned and his twelve-yearold brother, Joseph, saved from a similar fate only by the heroism of a boy companion, Alexander McGilligary.

Tom McGilligary, who is but twelve years old, was in the water with the Schwandt boys and, when they waded beyond their depth and sank, he scrambled to the shore and shoved out a dory. He jumped into the boat without waiting to put on his clothes and pushed out to where the boys had gone down. When Joseph Schwandt arose to the surface he grasped his collar and helped him crawl into the dory. But the two looked in vain for the younger Schwandt lad. The boat was propelled in various directions about the water, but he was not seen. Later, men in the neighborhood succeeded in recovering his body.

IMMUNITY FOR ACCUSED MEN UP TO JEROME

Affidavit Showing Railway Officials Escaped Prosecution for Subornation of Perjury.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Responsibility for immunity to officials of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, charged with subornation of perjury, was yesterday laid directly at the door of the District Attorney's office. Amazing allegations against District Attorney Jerome and his assistant, Isidor J. Kresel, were made by Lawyer Lemuan B. Treadwell, and appear to be borne out by an affidavit which sets forth in detail alleged flagrant practices on the part of the Metropolitan Street Railway officials in fighting negligence cases. Bribery is the most outrageous form is asserted to have been perpetrated.

The evidence was in the hands of the District Attorney, by those guilty of the subornation of perjury by Metropolitan Street Railway officials were brought to the attention of District Attorney Jerome by Mr. Treadwell.

He was the counsel in the case of a two-year-old boy, Samuel Rorts, who was crippled for life by one of the corporation's cars and whose father sued the Metropolitan company for damages.

It was after the third trial of the case that Louis Scharfman, who had been one of the Metropolitan's chief witnesses, came to Mr. Treadwell and announced that he had committed perjury.

Scharfman and Aparto, who was alleged by Scharfman to have given false testimony in the same case, have now disappeared.

SOCIETY RUSH TO CONTINENT HAS STARTED

Canopic Sailed Early To-day With 150 First Cabin Passengers.

The White Star liner Canopic, Captain Inman Sealby, sailed from her dock in Charlestown at 8 o'clock to-day, bound for the Azores and Mediterranean ports.

One hundred and fifty first cabin passengers, many of them of social prominence in Greater Boston, and 350 steerage passengers sailed on the big liner. Owing to the hour at which the steamer left the dock was not crowded, but there were many there to see their friends safely started for Europe.

Among the Greater Boston people who were passengers on the White Star boat were Mrs. J. B. Ayer and her two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth; Attorney L. S. Dabney and daughter, of South Harbor Manor; R. F. Bragdon, Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Bragdon and daughter and Dr. Lymon C. and Mrs. Newell.

Just after the gangway had been hauled in a Minneapolis party, consisting of George R. Lyman, Mrs. Lyman, five daughters and a son, was driven rapidly to the dock from the South Station, where their train had been late in arriving. The gangway was lowered again and they rushed aboard, just to the nick of time. Another five minutes and they would not have sailed for Europe on the Canopic.

Two other first cabin passengers of distinction were Walter Hale, leading man for John Drew last season, and his pretty and talented wife, Louise Closser, the actress who played in "Candida" with Arnold Daly. Mr. and Mrs. Hale are bound for Gibraltar. They took with them their touring car and will automobile through Spain and France. They will go first to Madrid to be in the city on the occasion of the wedding of King Alfonso to Princess Ena of England.

Fifteen deportations were made by the United States immigration officials, five Portuguese, four Greeks and six Italians, all peoples. The State deported six Italians who are insane.

BERKMAN TO BE SHADOWED TILL HE DIES

Detective Agency Employed to Follow Frick's Assailant to End of His Days.

COST MAY TOTAL $10,000

PITTSBURG, May 19.—Alexander Berkman, who was released yesterday after serving thirteen years and eight months for the attempted assassination of Henry C. Frick during the Homestead riots, will not be free from espionage so long as he lives. A detective agency is to keep track of him until he dies or until those who are interested in knowing his whereabouts die.

The head of the detective bureau admitted to-day that he had been engaged to shadow Berkman. He would not estimate the cost of this espionage, but it is believed that it will be at least $10,000.

Berkman left the Allegheny Workhouse and went to Allegheny City by trolley. He said he was going to Chicago to visit friends, and from there would go to St. Louis to take a place as labor editor on a daily newspaper.

2 BIG DRUG FIRMS CALLED INTO COURT

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 19.—Two big wholesale drug firms, the Wells & Richardson Company of this city and the Dr. J. B. Kendall Medicine Company of Enosburg Falls, have been cited to appear before the United States Circuit Court at Indianapolis on the first Monday in June. The subpoenas were served yesterday. The cases are brought in connection with others throughout the Middle West, where several big firms have been adjudged guilty of forcing a combine known as the Drug Trust, for the purpose of fixing prices in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Prey Entangled

UTTERLY stunned by this evidence of Edward West's guilt, Margaret stood in stupefied silence for a moment; then, unable to overcome her emotion, she burst into tears and threw herself on the floor beside the insensible figure on the couch. Davis took in the situation calmly, but Culberson, apparently much disturbed, pulled at his blonde mustache nervously. Finally he touched the girl on the arm.

"Come away," he said to her gently. "It is not a pleasant sight and you can do no good."

Mechanically the girl arose and left the room, following Culberson down the stairs.

"I cannot say how sorry I am, Miss Taylor——" he began, when they were once again in the reception room.

"Oh, can nothing be done?" she burst in. "Can't you do something? If you want me to believe in you help that poor boy upstairs."

Culberson was thoughtful as Margaret wept softly.

"You want me to try to save him the consequences of this theft?" he asked.

She nodded. She thought he put it rather harshly, but she didn't say so.

"I'm afraid," he explained, "that I can do nothing. You see, this man Davis has set his heart upon the reward. It is a tremendous sum, and it means a great deal to him."

"Can he not claim the money without implicating Mr. West?" she asked. "The reward is offered for the recovery of the jewel and says nothing about the thief."

"The one really means the other," he said. "Mr. Davis would have to invent a clever story to account for the recovery of only the jewel, and I am sure he is not inclined to do it."

"And there is no other way?" she asked anxiously.

Culberson was silent for a long time. At last he turned to suggest the only way that appeared to him.

"I have done a great many favors for this detective," he told her, "in fact once I saved his life. I might be able to induce him to allow Edward West to escape in a very noticeable manner. That would save his reputation as a detective."

"Oh, you are really kind to me," she said, putting out her hand impulsively to him.

"If I did that," he said holding the hand warmly, "how would you reward me?"

"Oh, I would thank you—I would be grateful to you all my life."

"I'm afraid that I should ask more than your thanks. I love you, Margaret, and I must seize this only chance of winning you. I will not give you up. If you will become my wife I will devote my life to making you happy."

"Oh, no," she exclaimed, taking away her hand. "I can't, oh, I can't."

"Wouldn't you do anything to save Edward West?"

She nodded her head.

"Well, this is the only way," he continued coldly. "It may seem a selfish way to you, but that degraded man upstairs is not worth your love. I must save you from yourself."

She looked at him imploringly, but he seized her hand and spoke to her tenderly yesterday.

"Listen," he said, "Miss Pierce is in Charlestown. I am going there now. Let me take you to her while I arrange for a marriage license. In an hour after you are my wife Edward West will be a free man."

"This is the only way?" It was a last desperate question.

"I'm afraid it is," he replied. "Shall I call Davis down and see if I can arrange this with him?"

"Yes, call him," she said, weakly. "Edward must be saved, no matter what the cost to me."

In answer to Culberson's summons Davis came down, and the proposition was laid before him. He was indignant at first at the suggestion that he could be bought off, but Culberson reminded him of the time he had saved his life, which fact coupled with the offer of an additional $10,000, made such an impression upon the mind of the detective that finally he was obliged to consent.

And so it was arranged. Margaret, with the dull apathy of despair, cared for nothing except the freedom of Edward West. Mechanically she allowed Culberson to lead her into the automobile waiting at the iron gate and cover her with soft rugs. Then they started on their way to Charlestown.

They had gone perhaps half a dozen blocks when they passed an open carriage in which sat a woman, heavily veiled. As the automobile dashed past the carriage the veiled woman, with an exclamation of astonishment, half arose from her seat.

It was Juliana.

Blue Serge Armure Suits Gentlemen

The serge is the sensible man's summer suit. It's the suit first chosen by the man whose wardrobe is limited; and the man of many suits considers his wardrobe deficient without one.

Our summer serge sack suits, both single and double breasted, are made of special hot-weather serge—as light and cool as it is durable. The dye is our well known unfadable blue, and the weave our exclusive "Armure."

$16 $20 and $25

The new peaked lapel, the shaped-in back and the long-cut coat are some of the chief features of the summer fashions in serges.

NOTE—We are style originators and makers, and all garments manufactured by us bear our full name and designation on the stylebook, attached to either the collar or inside pocket, as follows:

EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

$500 IN CASH FOR CONSOLATION PRIZES

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will give cash prizes aggregating $500 to those teachers who do not win foreign trips to the European Tour Election.

These "cash consolation prizes"—ten in number—will be awarded to the ten teachers who receive the highest votes, irrespective of location, and who fail to win one of the trips to the Old World.

First prize—$100.
Second prize—$100.
Third prize—$75.
Fourth prize—$50.
Fifth prize—$50.
Sixth prize—$25.
Seventh prize—$25.
Eighth prize—$25.
Ninth prize—$25.
Tenth prize—$25.
Total—$500.

Cash was decided upon for the "Consolation Prizes" after a flood of suggestions from the candidates and their friends had been given full consideration.

Many teachers and others suggested that the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN give a number of the non-winners of European Tours short trips in America, but a vast majority recommended that money be given.

Money being good for anything at any time, it was finally decided late yesterday to give $500 in cash.

The two highest will receive $100 each. This sum will pay for a splendid tour in America, but if a number of the "Consolation Prizes" desire it, the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will conduct a tour to Niagara Falls, New York, and into Canada instead of giving them the cash.

EUROPEAN TOUR CANDIATES AND THEIR STANDING

NURSE'S PRAYERS BRING WOMAN BACK FROM THE SHADOW OF DEATH

Life Restored to Apparently Dead Woman After 20 Minutes Suspended Animation.

Believes in Prayer, Prayed as She Worked

I am no Spiritualist, but I believe most thoroughly in the power of God and the efficacy of prayer, and I pray over my cases. I prayed as I worked to bring her back to life.—Mrs. T. F. Cleverly.

MRS. BERTHA E. HASKINS.

Mrs. Haskins, who lives in Middleboro, was restored to life by the prayers of her nurse, Mrs. T. F. Cleverly, after animation had been suspended 20 minutes.

MIDDLEBORO, May 19.—Did Mrs. Bertha E. Huskins, of No. 82 Oak street, pass into that valley from which no traveler is supposed to return, only to be called back by the determination, prayers and intelligent action of her nurse, Mrs. T. F. Cleverly, who, with the thought of the woman's helpless little babes to spur her on, labored as she never did before to bring life back to the apparently dead body of the mother.

That is the question agitating the people not only of this town but all who are interested in the phenomena of life and death. A BOSTON AMERICAN reporter visited the house and obtained the first authentic story of what is called by physicians here and elsewhere a most rare case of suspended animation. The nurse is a woman of medium hight, weighing about 225 lbs., and with a face that inspires trust and beams health and good cheer. She has more than the ordinary amount of the intuition common to all women and is rewarded by many former patients as their nurse. She was for some time with Dr. Morris Richardson of Boston, having charge of his most delicate cases. Mrs. Cleverly said she was glad to give the AMERICAN a correct account of the case.

By Mrs. T. F. Cleverly.

I WAS called into the case Sunday afternoon. I had been on a difficult case for some weeks and was thoroughly tired out. On reaching home I refused to answer the telephone, for I had a premonition that it meant work. I resisted the impulse to answer until I was fairly forced to, and then in answer to the question as to when I could come replied exactly opposite from what I had intended to.

At five o'clock Sunday afternoon I entered the sick room and immediately the feeling came over me that, while it was to be a hard fight, we were to win out.

I told Dr. Hodgson the attending physician, that if we could keep the patient until Tuesday noon she would stay with us, and I felt very certain she would stay.

I am no Spiritualist but I believe most thoroughly in the power of God and the efficacy of prayer and I pray over my cases.

At 6 o'clock Monday night I realized the fight was on. We had a very bad case of pleuro-pneumonia in the body of one who had been ill for years, and therefore the foundation to work upon was poor. At that time the pulse were at 165, respiration 72 and temperature here 105½.

Passed Into Shadow.

Slowly the change came. She ceased calling for "Mamma" and "Baby" and lay perfectly quiet. Hardly a breath could be discerned. The end was expected by all, but I still held my faith, although I will acknowledge it looked bad. At 9 o'clock she was in such a state that I feared if I forced open her lips to give the medicine it would strangle her, and I omitted it. The family were prepared for the end.

At about 9:50 o'clock the patient raised her hands as if to greet someone in the other world and with the most beautiful smile upon her face that I have ever witnessed, passed into the condition that has always been known as death.

I have nursed for many years and seen my share of people pass away and the lids of death were as apparent in this case as in any I have ever seen. The heart was still, the eyelids insensible to the touch of the finger, the jaw was dropped, the limbs and body had that appearance and feeling to the touch that inevitably accompanies death. I closed her eyes and straightened her limbs.

Then I thought of the two little children, aged two and four years, left without a mother's care, and there came to me a feeling that I cannot explain. I seemed to feel as though I was imbued with power from outside myself, for I determined that she should not go, that her children needed her and I went to work to bring her back.

Prayed While Working.

Although her mother and sisters were in hysterics and my attention needed to be divided, I forgot all but the mother and those two babes. While I worked rapidly I cannot tell now just what I did do. I know I forced open her mouth and gave what I had for stimulants, there being no liquor in the house. I rubbed her limbs and body and gave her what I could to assist and sent up a constant prayer for those little children. I do not profess much of anything, as I have said, but I believe in prayer, and I prayed as I worked.

For many minutes my labors appeared in vain, but I did not give up. Something urged me on. It must have been all of twenty minutes before I was rewarded with any sign of life. Then her breast heaved and I redoubled my efforts. Very soon she gave a little gasp and sigh and commenced breathing just as naturally as anyone.

In a few moments the doctor came in and he simply sat and looked, first at me and then at the patient. He had fully expected to find her dead and asked the question, "How did you do it?" It looked to him at the time as though she would not last a great while, but I insisted that she would and if she lived until Tuesday noon she would stay with us.

She remained in about the same condition until nearly noon of that day, when a change for the better was noticed and since then she has been on the gain, slowly but surely.

BOXERS INVADE GOTHAM

TAD SHOWS HOW BOXERS ARE FLOCKING TO GOTHAM FROM THE WEST

CONCERNING NEW YORK
THE METROPOLE NOWADAYS IS A RINGER FOR CORBETT'S IN FRISCO
WESTERN SPORTS ARE JUST FLOCKING TO GAY GOTHAM

BY TAD.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Have you been up around the Metropole lately? Well, have your ever been in prison? To-day around Forty-second street and Broadway a person might think he was back in the little town by the Golden Gate. Now around there all you hear is "Say, bite," "say, just before the earthquake," "I had a match at Colma with," and such talk. It's Frisco from soup to nuts. Most every fighter, manager and sport from the West has headed this way, and right here there is a crowd from there that would fill an ordinary sized theatre.

There's "Spider" Kelly, beating it along with Heine Rafael and Eddie Henley. Here comes Young Corbett, his brother and Patsy Corrigan. A block further down with a big grin and the millionaire smile, comes Billy Rocker with Hock Kee, the Australian fighter.

Then there are the Britts, Jack Gleason with Sam Berger, Harry Foley and Joe Thomas, Eddie Hanlon with his brother Dan, Frankie Neil with his old man and Tim Mcgrath, the man who tried to make Jack Munroe the heavyweight champion of the world.

There ought to be some lively doings around our little burg when the Westerners and Easterners come together.

A sport from Frisco says that he saw Joe Gans out there the day he left, standing at the ferry building with an old pair of overalls on. Gans was strapped and wired Herford for money, but had received no answer. However, Joe managed to get East on time.

* * *

Young Corbett will begin for Ray Grech in a few days, where he will put in two weeks with Patsy Corrigan training. At last Corbett realizes that he must be in shape in order to fight. This time he says he'll on the dead, and he will come back looking more like a washboard than an alligator pear.

* * *

If New York is ever classed in an with Quaker Town Rudolph will come to the Metropole on his back. To pass out in short and miss the smiling faces of the boys would be like looking up at the Flatiron and seeing the top off.

HANS AND LARRY FANS' FAVORITES

Now that the baseball season is here, and outside of playing second base Wagner is much better in any position than Lajoie.

This statement may sound a bit peculiar to those who have made an idol of Lajoie. Hans Wagner he undoubtedly one of the greatest players the game has ever known. He is a great batsman, an all-around parable infielder or outfielder, and one of the best base runners the game has ever known, besides, he has a good whip and can field balls around second to as much in the profession.

Lajoie's great natural grace is what makes him such a favorite. There is a touch of the artiste in everything that the Frenchman attempts. With Lajoie every move is a living picture. He is one of the few genuine personified.

So far as batting ability is concerned there is little to choose between the men. Both are topnotchers in this respect.

But when it comes to playing the field, running bases and headiness Wagner is far superior to Lajoie.

The big Frenchman is a great enough leader on the baseball diamond, but he is not in it with Wagner when it comes to running bases.

CANADA CHAMP FIGHTS.

Fred Routhier and Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence are signed to box at Augusta, Me., May 25. Routhier is the champion of Canada, and is said to be a "comer" in his class. The bout should be one of the best witnessed by the Maine sports this season.

MIKE TWIN IS AFTER GANS

Mike Twin Sullivan is going after the winner of the Joe Gans-Willie Lewis bout. He claims that he was careless in the last bout with the lightweight champion in the fifteenth round, when it was anybody's fight up to that time.

Mike says that Gans is the only man with a decision over him, and is deserving of another match.

NEARY TO BOX YANGER.

Charley Neary and Benny Yanger are signed to box eight rounds at the Badger A. C., Milwaukee, May 25. Neary will come on here right after that show.

LEWIS TOO MUCH FOR JOE GANS

NEW YORK, May 19.—Willie Lewis of New York broke into pugilistic fame last night by outfighting and outgeneralling Joe Gans, the light and welterweight champion, in a six-round bout at Madison Square Garden. While the law does not permit decisions being rendered, it was plainly evident that Referee Tim Hurst would have given the decision to Lewis had it been possible. The men did not weigh in, but it was said that Lewis tipped the beam at 142 pounds and Gans at 135 pounds. With no weighing in and no decision, no title passed with the bout.

Lewis used a left-hand jab throughout the bout and got away with it. While Gans was never in any distress, he did not seem able to block off the attack of Lewis, who followed one plan of battle—that of jabbing and covering to prevent a return. Gans was unable to get to his opponent with any degree of effectiveness. His friends said he was not in the best of shape.

ROUSE O'BRIEN AND GOODWIN

The local sports are much interested in the coming bout between Chester Goodwin and Rouse O'Brien, which will be decided at the Lincoln Club in Chelsea next Thursday night.

Their last bout, which was called a draw, created a great deal of comment, both boys arguing that they were entitled to the decision and being backed up in their contention by their adherents.

Goodwin has always claimed since that fight that he was suffering from a bad cold and grippe for three days before the battle and could not do himself justice. He has been importunate ever since for a chance to show his local admirers that he can beat Rouse, and he candidly confesses that he is confident that he will knock Rouse out next Thursday night.

O'Brien keeps quiet about what he will do, but he has won so consistently that his South Boston followers think he will give the latter Goodwin trouble. He has a terrible punch in his right hand, and the experience gained by his bout by his victories in Philadelphia denote that he is able to successfully cope with the best in his class. Speedy and fast was the last bout between this pair, and the indications all point to a sensational show at Chelsea next Thursday.

ARTFUL OUT OF BROOKLYN HANDICAP

NEW YORK, May 19.—Artful, favorite in the future book for the Brooklyn Handicap, will not start in the Gravesend track "classic" on Monday. She has been declared out of the race. Harry Payne Whitney announced yesterday that the mare was not in condition to be sent to the post for a hard race. He said:

"Mr. Rogers, on arriving at Brookdale, did not like the way in which Artful came out of her work. She has not had enough fast work to fit her, having only gone about a little better than a two minute gait, and her trial fast work some days ago was too fast for her condition.

"By starting her the public would be led to believe that she was fit for such a race, and this Mr. Rogers does not consider her to be.

"Artful is well, however, and will be pointed for Saratoga."

The withdrawal of Artful means the loss of many thousands of dollars by the persons who bet on her in the future book. Her loss cannot be placed at the door of Whitney, for every man who bet on the great mare did so at his own risk.

Dandelion, the horse that finished second to Grapple in the Metropolitan Handicap, is now one of the favorites in the Brooklyn. With Oxford and Merry Lark he is considered to have the best chance to win.

TIVERTON IS FAST GETTING INTO TRIM

For a busy place, one has only to strike the Hudson River Driving Park in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is the report of a visitor who devoted a day there in watching the horses get their work for the racing season to begin.

Over 200 head are in the stables of the numerous trainers, all of whom, it seems, are being prepared for the grand circuit, and will be seen at the Readville meeting next August.

E. W. Rossmire has stepped his horses along the fastest of any of the trainers. He has been the last quarters of workouts miles with Minley, 2:14¾, in 31¾ seconds; Kid Silva, 2:20¾, in 32½ seconds; Lee Queen, 2:16¼, in 32½ seconds, and Fan Lee, 2:18¼, in 32½ seconds. The last eighth in 15¼ seconds.

John Howell has the pacing, including Tiverton, 2:08¾. The latter never looked in better shape, having fully recovered from the injury of last season. Howell intends that he will be fit and ready for the three-year-old pacing events. Others are Lou Dillon, 2:04¾, and Wentworth, 2:08¾.

Tommy Murphy has the largest string on the track, and include a lot of fast record horses from Lewiston, 2:02, back to Glen Dale, 2:26½. Old trainers are John Hig gins, Grant Smith, Dell Oliver, Whipple, Jerome McKinney and Jack Rombaugh. Mart Demarest is due in a few days.

READVILLE TRAINERS ARE CLOSELY WATCHING THEIR FUTURITY CANDIDATES

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

Right now the trainers at Readville track have the opinion that they have a corker on the two and three-year-old trotters of the entire country.

With several futurity events each year to be raced for, valued all the way from $10,000 up to the Kentucky worth $21,000, there has been a great boom in getting hold of youngsters giving promise of making good with judicious handling by expert trainers.

It may be that the success of Sadie Mac and Miss Adbell having annexed the Kentucky event to their credit has not been without its influence in partnership by New England capitalists, with Oxford and Merry Lark he is considered to have the best chance to win.

Allerton of the same age. Palmer has been going easy with him, but with only a couple of miles each yesterday foremen he marched through the quarter stretch, the eighth in 30 seconds. It was accomplished so impressively that the boys have added his name to those which will stand keeping an eye on.

Miss Colombo Speedy.

Lon McDonald has two Kentucky futurity winners to his roll of honor Sadie Mac and Miss Adbell. With a man of his experience with youngsters it would hardly be surprising if he came out of the running when counting the chickens before the eggs are hatched. Miss Colombo is the candidate for the two-year-old honors. Lon has pinned behind her a couple of times this Spring, and he says that a 2:20 gait is but a big jog for her now it means a thought ful consideration.

But to start it real live argument among the trainers at the track all that is needed is to mention the name of Cochato as one of the best two-year-old in training. About very one has in their stable from one to four or five. The majority were stred by Gregory, 2:06¾. How they all do go for a piece of track when asked! All the little shows have, anyway, is a go on a track. It has been remarked that trainers never tire of the breeding of the horses, but in the case of these colts every mother's son of them can reel off the breeding of his colt with accuracy, and all are bred in the purple.

Henry Titer has a new addition to his string that he has named Titer, purchased by Bingen, dam May Fern (2:11¾), making her a full sister of Lord Revelstoke (2:12¾), one of the best three-year olds last racing year. Titer is a big, fine looker outside of having been broken to harness he has been doing the trick in such a way as to seem that her head is full of trot. Titer, too, is looking on The Sovereign to take to the races. He is the property of Sam Corey.

ALL-ROUND CHAMPS IN HUB.

Boston has secured the all round athletic championship event which will be held June 23 under the auspices of the B. A. A. at Tech Field. It will draw the biggest collection of individual athletes ever seen in the Hub. Sheridan of New York was the winner last year. Entries close June 18 with George Billings, B. A. A.

In the same issue with Cedric is Bard 4, Exeter street, Boston.

Battling Looking for a Bout With "Homeless Jimmie"

"PUT UP OR SHUT UP"

—Nelson to Britt

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, May 19.—Battling Nelson is so sure that he will win from Herrera that he has turned attention to Jimmy Britt, who has been writing the newspaper men that Nelson does not want to fight him again.

A bunch of New York papers containing interviews with Britt received by Nelson yesterday caused the Dane to make the following clean-cut statement about a return match with Britt.

"I see by the papers that Britt says he wants to fight me, so now let him come. In addition he will put up a $10,000 side bet. I am going to call him on this proposition, and I am going to call him so strong that there won't be a chance for him to crawl out of a fight without making a fool exhibition of himself.

"Here is my proposition: If Britt really wants to fight me let him post that $10,000 with Ted Sullivan, in New York Evening Journal. The minute we hear that he has money to up we will cover it from this end, placing our money in the hands of the Los Angeles Examiner.

"There will be no trouble about his getting a fight. He can make the match inside of five minutes and there will be no hitch at this end of the string. Wilson and I will give him a hard fight, for if there is one fellow whom I feel certain I can beat every day in the week it is James Edward Britt.

"I don't want him to come back at me with a bunch of newspaper talk all I want him to do is to signify his willingness to fight. I do not intend to be their Pall guy for a lot of advertising stuff. It's put up or shut up with him or I'll lay the money do the talking. It is up to Britt to make the move."

As soon as he places the money in Ted's hands he will consider the match is on, and will put ours up at this end. "I will give him a fight, I never was much of a talker, and fighting is my long suit."

Nelson is very much in earnest about this matter, and says he will either force Britt to fight or crawl out of a match.

The fact that Nelson is looking ahead to another match shows that he has great confidence in his ability to beat Herrera. The Dane has been boxing with four or five men who weigh him from fifteen to thirty pounds—most of them awkward fighters who know little about boxing. Nelson remembers the accident which left him with a stiff arm, and will not take any more chances. From now on he will box with men about his own weight.

He is within four pounds of the weight now, and never was in better condition for a hard match.

Mexican in Fine Shape.

Herrera is also in great shape. The Mexican, who has twice been within reach of championship, thinks this is his last chance, and will surely make it a ripping, tearing contest. His trainers have been impressing upon him the importance of forcing the pace at top speed, and if Herrera lives up to his instructions he will start out as he usually finishes, with a great burst of speed which will carry the Dane along at a terrible clip while it lasts.

Realizing that on this fight depends his future Herrera is training harder than ever before. Yesterday morning he did a twelve-mile stunt on the road, coming back to his training quarters with the perspiration streaming from his body.

Herrera is farther away from the weight than Nelson, and the chances are that the Mexican will be forced to work right up to the last minute to do 134 pounds at 4 o'clock. The sparring matches at Herrera's training quarters are more like slugging matches, and twice yesterday Arcelie landed his terrible right on his brother, Manuel, one of his sparring partners, putting him almost out each time.

Herrera Wants Odds.

Herrera wants to bet a little money on himself, and has offered to bet $600 against $1,000, as he thinks Nelson should be a ten to six favorite over him. He found no takers, but declared that the bet stands for anybody who wants to take it.

Considering that both men are hard to hurt the contest is hard to predict. Herrera is clever enough to hit Nelson with that right hand. If Nelson can weather a storm of hard wallops to the jaw he may beat Herrera as he beat Britt, however.

Both training quarters are crowded with interested fight fans, Nelson's gate receipts for all over Southern California.

CHICAGO MAY MEET BROWN'S ELEVEN

Arrangements have been completed for a football game between the elevens of Cornell and Chicago Universities next Fall. They are to come together on Marshall Field, Chicago, on November 10. There is talk of the Maroons arranging other games with Eastern colleges, Princeton and Brown having been mentioned in that connection. In 1899 Cornell and Chicago played football and Chicago won, 17 to 11. On account of framing up the new rules and consequent uncertainty regarding the continuance of the game as several colleges, schedules have been delayed this season, but three of Cornell's games are known.

In addition to the game with Chicago the complete list includes Columbia on Thanksgiving Day (made with Donnell-vania and the game with Princeton on October 27. Princeton-Cornell game is to be played in New York, probably at the Polo Grounds. Other prominent dates for next season are Harvard vs. West Point on October 20; Yale vs. West Point on November 3; Princeton vs. West Point on November 10; West Point vs. Annapolis on December 1; Pennsylvania vs. Michigan on November 17; Yale vs. Princeton on November 17, and Harvard vs. Yale on November 24.

HARVARD '09 CREW WON.

The Harvard freshmen crew won the class rowing championship yesterday afternoon in the annual Beacon cup regatta. As winners of this regatta the freshmen crew will represent Harvard in the junior eight-oared race at the American Henley at Philadelphia May 26.

DANE-MEXICAN RECEIPTS.

LOS ANGELES, May 19.—The sale of seats for the Nelson-Herrera fight opened here with advance orders amounting to $20,000. It is claimed that the total receipts will amount to $45,000.

MAINE CHAMP FIGHTS ADAMS

The National Athletic Club of Fairfield, Me., has an excellent array of bouts for the first show which is to be given in the Opera House in Fairfield May 21. The main bout is of ten rounds and the principals are Johnny Fraser of Portland, who claims the featherweight title of Maine, and that willing Newton boxer, Frank Adams, who is one of the most satisfactory performers we have had in this section. Adams and Fraser met in Portland some time ago and a red-hot battle was the result of their conflict.

The semi-final introduces Kid Dell of Brunswick, Me., and Joe Chartrand.

Paul Joller of Waterville will face John McFadden in one preliminary and Tommy Farland of Waterville will face an unknown in the other.

NEARY TO MEET KID GOODMAN

Charley Neary and Kid Goodman have been matched for the Lincoln Club for June 4. Goodman and Neary fought at Milwaukee in December, 1905, and the bout after eight rounds of milling was a draw.

BASEBALL INDIANS' LAST CHANCE BOXING LEWIS DEFEATS GANS RACING AND ALL ATHLETICS

HARVARD ATHLETES TO MEET OLD ELI TO-DAY

Harvard expects to triumph over Yale in the dual track games to be held on Soldiers' Field this afternoon between the rivals of the Crimson and the Blue. It is the first time in the past four years that the Crimson track men have gone into a track meet with Yale with this expectation, but this is the Crimson belief to-day. The meet promises to be a very close one, with Yale strong in the field events and Harvard powerful on the track.

Harvard estimates give the meet to the Crimson all the way from sixty points to forty-four in a close score of forty-four to fifty. The latter is the prevailing belief.

Two Best Races of the Day.

The two races of the day promise to be the two-mile and the half. In the latter Parsons and Tillson of Yale are expected to meet Whitman of Harvard. If he is in the best shape, Parsons is easily the best runner of these three, but as he has just returned from his trip to Greece, it is thought that Whitman can give Parsons the race of his life.

In the two-mile Hall of Yale will encounter a most worthy foe in Stone, the long-legged Harvard two-miler, who recently established a new Harvard record of 9 minutes 48 4-5 seconds for two miles. Despite the fact that Hall is the present intercollegiate champion, Harvard men are picking Stone to defeat him. Crosby of Harvard should be close to the winner of the event when the tape is reached, as he was but a few feet behind Stone when the latter made his new record.

Harvard will rely on Lockwood, Dodge, Ford and Hamilton in the 100-yard dash, while Yale will pin her faith on Lowe, Butler, Torrey and Robinson. These same men will run in the 220, with Captain Dives added for the Crimson and Burch and Twichell for the Elis. Harvard expects to capture a substantial number of points in these two events, relying on Lockwood and Dodge for a first and second in the 100 and Dodge and Dives for a first and third in the 220. Torrey, when in shape is the best of the Yale men in the 100 and Twichell in the 220.

In the quarter Harvard will present three very fast men in Captain Eddie Dives, R. L. Young and Jack O'Brien. All these men have run in a fraction of a second over 50 seconds. Of the bunch, Captain Dives is the best. Gibson and Ewing are the Yale representatives, and they will have to work hard to secure a win. Cobb, for Harvard, and Tillson, for Yale, are both good second men to Whitman and Parsons. Of the mile runners Miner of Harvard has easily the best record, having run in competition in 4 minutes 28 4-5 seconds this Spring. L'Engle of Yale and Turner of Harvard give promise of a hard fight for second place.

Harvard in the Hurdles.

In the hurdles Harvard will present Rand, Dow, Brinsmade, Boger and Young, with Yale relying on Estes, Captain Cates, Hills and Porter. The high hurdles are conceded to Estes, who is a 15 4-5 second man. Brinsmade and Rand are both sure 16-second men and are counted on for second and third. Harvard is looking to Jimmy Doyle to capture the low hurdles, despite the presence of Captain Cates and Porter. Doyle is a very uncertain runner, however, and his event may easily go to Yale.

In the field events Yale has a decided advantage. With Sheffield and Knox in the broad and Hasbrouck and Marshall representing the New Havenites in the high jump, Harvard does not hope to get more than a third place in these events. Gilbert of Yale, with a record of 11 feet 8 inches in the pole, should be the winner. Grant of Harvard is vaulting in splendid form and will cover 11 feet 8 inches in the Darmouth games. Yale will undoubtedly get a third in this event. Harry Kersburg is the man Harvard is trusting to to beat Tom Sheviin in the hammer. The latter has not done better than 145 feet in competition this Spring. This is about what Kersburg is good for, so that the hammer seems to be a very even thing between the two old football rivals. Dyeson of Harvard is good for close to 140 feet and a third in the hammer. Ben Stephenson in the shot looks like a sure winner, with a consistent record of over forty-three feet. Hanley of Harvard has been putting in the neighborhood of forty-two feet, so that he should trouble White of Yale for second place.

If Kersburg can beat Sheviin in the hammer and Doyle land the low hurdles, the meet should go to Harvard by a comfortable margin. These events going to Yale, the meet should be a very close one, with the odds still in favor of the Crimson.

THREE OF FAST CLEVELAND PLAYERS.

Harry Bemis is considered one of the best catchers in the business. Besides having a good whip, he is a hard hitter, which makes him a very valuable man. Joss is a crack pitcher. It was he who walloped Boston yesterday, 14 to 1.

SECOND BASEMAN LAJOIE.

Napoleon Lajoie, the Woonsocket lad, is the leader of the Clevelands. He was out of the game most of last season with a lame foot. He is all right now and out for the pennant.

Umpire—Connolly.

This is the last day of the week, and the fans are wondering if the Boston team will be able to ring in a victory before its close.

The Bostons, or the Down and Out Club, as they are being called by the enthusiasts these days, have lost every game they have played on the home grounds this engagement. Fifteen defeats in a row is losing some.

A list of the Boston losers is: New York, one; Philadelphia, four; Washington, three; St. Louis, four, and Cleveland, three.

Just think of it! Less than two years ago, the Bostons were the champions of the American League, and less than three years ago, they were the world's champions. How a team which has held such high honors, and playing almost the identical team they captured all those titles with could slump so badly is beyond the conception of the fans.

Is the Team Laying Down?

The manner of ball they are playing has made many fans believe that the "Down and Outs" are laying down. Time after time they have shown a disposition to lag, and even Manager Collins has fumbled easy grounders and the like in a very indifferent manner.

The Boston team has shown no disposition to loaf at all since they arrived here. In important branches of the game they have displayed an alarming ignorance. Fly balls have gone to the outfield and nobody has seemed to know enough to catch them, when men have been on base, sacrifice hitting has never crossed the mind of the home players, and stealing bases is an art lost long ago by them.

Altogether the Bostons have gone back woefully. There is no denying the fact that Johnson will have to use the most drastic measures in order to save the club from utter demoralization. Not a member of the team seems to care what happens, and it's only a case of losing game after game. Right along the players have been saying that the veterans they needed the warm weather to loosen up. Yesterday they got it, and were beaten worse than ever.

Fans Have Been Loyal.

The most remarkable thing about the lackadaisical style of playing is the loyal way the fans have stood by them. The Hub undoubtedly have patronized the club record-breaking than they have shown an inclination to lay down. Johnson is going to go to the mat with the players, and the occasions have been few and far between at that.

But to-day the Bostons may turn over a new leaf, and start winning games. Young, the veteran of many notable battles, is down on the books to twirl. Cy has not yet been a genuine success on the firing line this season. At spring last season, when he has pitched he has not been backed up to any extent by his team-mates, and has lost most of his games by the narrow margin of one run.

GIBSON MAY BE SOLD TO COLUMBUS

A strong rumor was sprung to-day that Norwood Gibson, the Boston American pitcher, has been secured by the Columbus team of the American Association.

It is understood that the Boston American management has given Gibson his unconditional release to the Columbus team, and he is free to go to the minors.

Gibson's departure will not be severely felt here, as he has not been pitching anywhere near his past form, and it would be advisable to secure some big-leaguer as a recruit to pull the team out of the present slump.

TIGERS' NINE TIPPED TO BEAT CRIMSON TO-DAY

Batting Order.

HARVARD.	PRINCETON.
Leonard, 3b.	Beek, s.s.
Stephenson, c	Dillon, c.f.
Dexter, l.f.	Harlan, l.f.
Heilman, c.f.	Vaughan, 2b.

McCall, 2b.	McLean, r.f.
Harvey, s.s.	Bard, 1b.
Currier, r.f.	Conery, c.
Castle, p.	Byram, p.

Harvard and Princeton meet to-day on Soldiers' Field in the first of the most important eastern college diamond battles. According to the make-up of the two teams on paper, the Tigers should be returned easy winners. The Harvard team is made up almost entirely of new players, none of whom has been given a show to bat consistently, even against comparatively weak pitchers. Against the Princeton veteran Byram there is little ground to believe that Harvard will be able to bat out enough runs to assure victory. Last year Harvard had the mighty Colcord to get against Byram, but this year the Cambridge university has no such pitcher to offer.

Castle or Hartford.

Either Castle or Hartford will begin the game against the Tigers. Castle is a steady pitcher, with good control, but he has only fair speed and no very deceptive curves. Hartford is a freshman, a left-handed pitcher, with speed and curves, but no control and a habit of going badly to pieces in critical places. Against either of these men Princeton should have no trouble in securing more runs than Harvard can gather off Byram.

The Harvard team is capable of playing a very fast game in the field despite the fact that three or four varsity infielders are freshmen. Burr at first, McCall at second, and Harvey at shortstop. Charlie Leonard from last year's nine is on third base and playing a star game. Leonard is very fast on his feet and a terror when he gets on bases. In the outfield, Dexter, a veteran from last year, is playing a splendid game, both in the field and at the bat. Heilman and Currier, left and right, are both new men. Both play a fast game in the outfield. Heilman has had streaks of good batting, but has lately fallen off badly.

Game Is Important.

Despite the apparent superiority of the Tiger team, to-day's game is regarded as a great event at Cambridge. This is partly owing to the fact that coach Haughton will be very uncertain game, and also due to the pleasant relations between Harvard and Princeton. The tri-cornered agreement between Yale, Princeton and Harvard as to eligibility rules and the return to baseball series between Princeton and Harvard have gone a long way toward doing away with the ugly feeling on the part of the Cambridge collegians toward Princeton.

ASHLEY LOST BOUT.

WOONSOCKET, May 19.—Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence was given the decision over Guy Ashley of Fall River at the end of eight rounds of the fastest fighting ever seen in this city at the Woonsocket Opera House.

Sullivan had the better of the fight all the way through. At no stage of the game was Ashley considered very dangerous.

YALE FIELD, New Haven, May 19.—Yale met Holy Cross to-day in the second clash of the season in a heart-breaking tussle, after winning, 10 to 9, at Worcester last Saturday.

Yale trotted out the same umpire, Frank Beecher, against whom Holy Cross kicked last Saturday. Yale's catcher was crippled and Wylie, the freshman backstop, was installed as backstop. Tony Pratt was put in the box. Williams was laid off by weak hitting and Church sent to centre field.

"LITTLE CY" FOR LAST REDS GAME

Special Cable to Boston American.

CINCINNATI, May 19.—This is the last day for the Tennessee to ride city. They have already lost two games out of three. Manager Tenney is very anxious to make it an even break, and in order to do so will send "Little Cy" Young after the honors.

Pfeffer was in the box for the Bostons yesterday, and lost 7 to 6. Both he and Overall, who did the twirling for the home club, were hit effectively. The latter developed extreme wildness in the 8th and was relieved by Pitcher Cheek.

Each side made nine hits, the Reds batting for a total of twelve. The Bostons had three errors charged up against them, while the locals only had two.

Boston scored a run in both the first and the second. The locals took the lead in the third, when they tallied thrice. Boston tied the "Cincies" in the 7th but the latter took the lead by four runs in their half of that inning. Boston started in to beat out the home club in the 8th when they scored three more runs, but Cheek was sent to the rescue, and saved the day for the Reds.

LOCAL MOTORISTS IN HILL CLIMB

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Some of the best known of local motorists have entered for the Readville hill climb to be held Thursday afternoon next. There is bound to be a battle of the giants. The American cars will find competitors worthy of their steel in the several foreign entries, such for instance as the Stevens, Darracq, the Hilis Flat, and the leading foreign cars entered for the contest, and that they will make the going most interesting goes without saying. The Kapier which made such a record at Ormond and climbed the great Mt. Washington will also be found in the climb, and immediately thereafter Hillard will come to Boston and prepare for his contest against Downey at the Readville track on May 30. Among the local men who have made entries are J. H. McAlman, E. A. Gilmore, Harry Fosdick, James Linnehan, A. R. Dangs and Alvan T. Fuller.

* * *

The special committee of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association appointed to consider the best means of extending and strengthening the organization held a meeting yesterday afternoon, Mr. McAlman being in the chair. A new constitution and by-laws was considered at full length, and the committee adopted certain suggestions and recommendations which will be made public at the meeting of the full association, to be held next Friday. It is understood that the recommendations include the disbandment of the present organization, and an immediate reorganization, under different lines and conditions from those now in operation.

There are many rumors abroad as regards the construction of a new racing machine for a prominent local enthusiast. This gentleman has already secured an option on an eight-cylinder gasolene car, and it is said that he has likewise purchased a new steam car, which he will enter the coming Vanderbilt, and also drive at the coming Readville contest.

BIG SCHOOL BATTLE TO-DAY

The game between Boston English High and Somerville High and Latin schools at Somerville this afternoon promises to be an interesting one, and will have an important effect on the interscholastic championship.

Both schools have strong teams, English High having one of the best teams in its history.

Each team has been beaten once this season, Somerville losing to Brookline and English High to Hingge Manual Training.

BOSTON BLUES SIGN OLD STAR

"Buck" Donovan of Roxbury, the star Montreal pitcher bitter of '97, has signed with the Boston Blues. They play Knoxville on May 28, and at South Quincy on May 30 morning. Game wanted for some strong South Shore Club for May 20 afternoon. Manager O'Connor, No. 3167 Washington street, Boston.

CURE BEAT HOPPE.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Louis Cure was the winner of the 3,000 point contest at 18.2 balk line billiards. He defeated his opponent, William Hoppe, by holding his own both afternoon and evening. Hoppe gained slightly in the evening, but lost ground in the afternoon block of points.

ROYAL CHILDREN OF ITALY ENJOY LIFE "JUST LIKE OTHER BABIES"

King Often Romps With His Three Children

ROYAL children enjoy life very nearly as much as those who are born to be their subjects. The little Princesses Yolande and Mafalda and Prince Fred mont, their baby brother, who some day will be King of Italy, like to romp and play just the same as other children.

"Umberto" is the name of the baby who will be king. At first Yolande and Mafalda were jealous of him because the whole country went wild when he was born over a year and a half ago.

"Why, he's just like other babies," they thought. "I don't see why everyone is making such a fuss over him." But he was such a fine little fellow that Yolande, who is five, and Mafalda, who is three and a half years old, were glad to have a little brother for a playmate.

Splendid times do these children have in the great grounds which surround the Quirinal Palace in old Rome. They have all the toys they want, and are not old enough to be bothered with lessons or school. So all day long they play together and have splendid times.

King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Elena are, of course, very fond of their pretty children. When his work permits it, the King visits the nursery and romps with the children just like any other father would.

Queen Elena often takes her little ones out driving. Owing to their position, they do not go out as other folks do, for they have to be attended by soldiers and guards, so see that no harm comes near them.

But the little girls are used to this and the little king is too young to care, so they are always happy and never think that some day they will have the responsibility of nations on their shoulders. That is a long time off, and while they are children they are going to enjoy life as much as ever they can.

FIRST GROUP PHOTOGRAPH PRINTED IN AMERICA OF THE THREE CHILDREN OF THE KING AND QUEEN OF ITALY.

ORIGIN OF THIMBLES

THE thimble was originally called a thumb bell by the English, because worn on the thumb, then a thimble, and finally its present name. It was a Dutch invention, and was first brought to England in 1695.

Thimbles were formerly made only of iron and brass, but in comparatively late years they have been made of gold, silver, steel, horn, ivory and even glass and pearl. In China beautiful carved pearl thimbles are seen, bound with gold and with the top of gold. The first thimble introduced into Siam was a bridal gift from the king to the queen, and it is said to have been made of gold, and thickly studded with diamonds arranged to spell the queen's name.

Do You Gain Anything by Being Always in a Hurry?

Most of Us Might Learn a Lesson From the Easy Life of Methuselah, the World's Oldest Man

By Clara Morris

YES, seemingly Dr. Osler has prevailed and the President has compromised on a basis of sixty-five years instead of forty, for the other day the Civil Service Commission reported from every one of the Government departments concerning the advanced age of its clerks—advance age, pugh!

It appears the oldest man in the service, the Methuselah as it were, is only ninety-one years old, and is proud of being the only one in his class. Wait till I tell him of another old fellow, and see his pride lower.

Although history gives very little information of the labors of Methuselah, we know that his hours did not "slum-ber along." Time, we are told, never winged messengers that outrun debtors and cut short lovers' dreams, and read by dimples, fair one, into wrinkles.

The coil of that life of 969 years, rolled out from the present, where would it not stretch to? Beyond the landing of the Pilgrims; beyond the Reformation; into the dim twilight of the middle ages; way back beyond the birth of a continent, and over the graves of twenty-six generations—just think of it!

What was our Eldest Man doing all that time, where were his hands and thoughts employed through all that wilderness of years? What could he not have done? He could have pierced the earth's centre or built as high as heaven!

We are alone certain of one fact, that he ate three meals a day, and at a moderate rate of computation think of the quantity of solids and liquids he must have consumed!

We'll leave the calculation of the latter quantity to those particularly interested in fluids. What a field—or I should say, rather, what a river—is open here to your investigation, gentlemen! His tea-drinking capacity I'll leave to the fingers and tongues of the women's clubs.

At the cup of life, which the hot haste of this generation dashes to its dregs in threescore years generally, he sipped away calmly for centuries. His years were not spent in a brief paradise of youth and a dreary waste of dotage, but were probably made up of one symmetrical life equally divided as Shakespeare's "Seven Ages."

At first let's consider him as an infant "mewling and puking" in his mother's arms, only in his case, instead of as in ours, which covers on the average eighteen months, he must have been subject to the cares maternal, "of nourishment and resentment, of that order for twenty years at least.

Nor did he grow up and marry in unseemly haste, for Lamech, his eldest son and heir, was born in the one hundred and eighty-seventh year of his father's pilgrimage. Why, our every-day love would be like the sissing of a firecracker as compared to the length of its fuse in those days.

He waited ten times as long as Jacob for the Rachel of his hopes, and if the maiden blushes of those days must have been of fast colors to last three centuries—presumably the old maid's limit then.

We gallop through our existence as fashionable tourists of the Continent, catching brief glimpses here and there of the world's wonders. The Alps, the Rhine, give us only a fortnight's pleasure. The masterpieces of Raphael and Titian demand but a passing moment. And where yes it all to end? In diseased hearts and softened brains, or perhaps in an attempted journey to the moon.

Those old patriarchs wandered through the world sublimely ignorant of automobiles, trolleys, elevated or subways, oblivious of time, when we are constantly cutting it into bits.

For the commonest excuse of the present-day is, "I really have not time" to do this or that. "I have not a moment to spare," is the hasty statement which we hear twenty times a day. "Well, I can give you just two or three minutes," is the reply of the business man whose advice you wish gratis.

If the required interview has anything to do with the possible and probable acquisition of money, the usual hurry will to a certain extent calm down, and breathing time for the purpose of considering the tip is not looked upon as wasted. Why, hurry extends even to the pulpit—do not some of you recall the length of the old-time prayer?

But those old fellows strolled through the "green pastures and beside still waters." They lived in God's wild and magnificent eye; learned His great language; caught His clear accents—hence the Bible's worth. Ah! how many things they noted which go unseen beneath the tread of our hurrying feet!

Keep the Beds Clean and Neatly Made Up

IT matters not how handsome the appointments of the room, how soft and luxurious the carpet, how fine and white the linen, if the bed is poorly and sloppily made it gives the whole apartment an untidy look that no amount of elegance can atone for it.

In good bed making one of the first requisites is a perfect adaptation of mattress and springs to the bedstead. Next, a well made mattress, whether it be of hair, wool, moss or excelsior, and over this a "puff" or mattress cover made of thin, unbleached cotton cloth that can be bought for five cents a yard, containing three rolls of cotton, tied with tiny cotton. Have the "puff" large enough to tuck under the sides of the mattress, to avoid curling up under the sheet.

To young home-keepers these suggestions regarding bed clothing are valuable. Buy good linen sheeting, bleached or not bleached as preferred, and if for an ordinary sized bed, nine-quarters wide. Cut your sheets two and a half yards long and this will allow for a hem three inches at the top and an inch and a half at the bottom. If you can afford it, buy a pair of heavy blankets, for when soiled they can be washed and made to look nearly as well as new, but if they are too expensive a luxury, cheese cloth comforts will answer nicely, as they are warm, soft and light, and those qualities are by no means to be despised in bed clothing.

White comforters are not to sell at the top when they come in contact with the face, particularly if the hair be liable to fall at night, and this should always be done. To remedy this, take a width of cheese cloth, making it as long as the comfort is wide, sew up the ends and slip over your comfort or blanket, making it secure by basting it on, or by means of little shoe-strings, which will come on for the face as well as incumbrance the sleeper. Have two for each bed, so that they may be washed as often as desired.

There is nothing so desirable for summer covers as the old-fashioned scrap quilt, of which our mothers and grandmothers were so fond. They usually contain so little cotton that they are almost as easily washed as a sheet, and can with very little trouble be kept sweet and wholesome, and last for years.

In selecting counterpanes be sure to get them large enough. Good counterpanes are usually wide enough, but frequently fall short of what they should be in length.

Now as to making the bed: Begin by seeing that your mattress lies smoothly on the springs, then on the puff, tucking under well, next the sheets, with wide hems at the top. See, if you can, that the sides of the bed perfectly upright, spread the bed covers, and instead of tucking them under, lay the extra width upon the mattress. Now put on the white spread, seeing that the centre figure is exactly in the centre of the bed.

Do not tuck the spread under the mattress, but between the springs and bedstead, drawing it by slightly each way that not a suspicion of a wrinkle remains. Lastly put on the pretty, fluffy sham pillows covered with daintily trimmed cases.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner.

THEY swung on down the silent country highway, with the mad exhilaration of the speed at which they were rushing getting into their blood. Hedges and telegraph poles flashed by; lights gleamed from distant farms and cottages, and were left behind; the first milestone they passed said that they were fifteen miles from Central Park. The road ran parallel here by the side of the New York Central, and as they loafed on they heard the sound of a train behind them.

"The rates will be shut at the level crossing," he said, slackening speed.

They came to a halt at the large wooden gates that lay across the road, waiting for the train to go by. The train was not going very fast, and the lights from the moving carriages fell on the face of the two in the motor on the other side of the railway gates.

From the window of a first-class carriage Philip Haggard, journeying home, saw the occupants of the motor, and was rather surprised to recognize Olga Herries.

"So this was why John had to run away directly after dinner? I wonder who the woman is whom he takes on moonlight drives? I wonder, too, if Rosamund Wynter knows—and if I can make capital out of this?"

And, like Freddy Delamere a little time previously, Philip Haggard wished that he could have caught a glimpse of the face of the woman sitting by Herries's side.

CHAPTER XXIX.
The Woman With Heries

DELAMERE had already made up his mind on that point, as he raced to the station to catch the next train to New York; he felt convinced that the woman was Olga Vail.

Everything indicated it; the fact of Olga's coming to the place where Herries lived, Herries's stealth and secrecy in getting the cloaked woman into the car—Freddy had seen him peer cautiously up and down the road before the woman ventured from the gate—and his mad haste to even the fact of the car having been taken round to that quiet back lane to wait for them. Everything seemed to point to the woman being Olga Vail.

If he could only intercept them, catch them in coming? He would have Herries doubly in his power then, he thought, as he took his seat in the train.

Delamere got out of the train with his plans all cut and dried. He must first of all find out to which hotel Herries had taken his companion.

With unlimited assurance Freddy swaggered into the Monopole, past the gorgeous ly attired flunkeys, and walked up jauntily to the little office where a clerk sat behind the visitor's register. The man glanced up at Freddy's approach, then looked him up and down with a cold, supercilious eye.

Freddy had him in a ditch waiting for Herries—and he knew it. This might be the recognized procedure according to hotel tradition, but the process had its unpleasant side appearance. For a ditch which in Winter held a foot or two of water it had been comparatively dry; but the clay at the bottom even in Summer created a surprising amount of moisture, and Mr. Delamere's boots, plastered with yellow mud, suggested that he had been following agricultural pursuits on ploughed land.

His check tweeds were covered with dust and had sundry whips of dead grass sticking to the back; in his eagerness to find Herries he had forgotten to have a wash, as he had intended, and a facilities taste might have found fault with his linen altogether, he looked decidedly unlike the usual visitor at the Monopole.

"Any luggage?" asked the man at the desk, himself immaculately spruce; and there was a snigger from the lift boy that made Freddy redden and yearn to box his ears. But he disregarded the sarcasm and the sneering himself up haughtily.

"I wish to know if my friend, Mr. John Herries, is staying here?"

As he uttered the words a voice behind him exclaimed:

"Why, it can't be Freddy Delamere applying for a job? Are 'fog turns' off the menu?"

He turned angrily; a waiter had passed as he crossed the hall to indulge in this playful sally, and the disgusted Freddy recognized an old acquaintance with whom he had once had a trifling difference of opinion when the man had been waiter at a music hall he knew.

"Anyway, Freddy, I am glad to see you've let your hair grow before applying for a crib here," went on the facetious waiter, with a wink at the clerk in the office, delighted to see Freddy's discomposed rage.

"Let's see; was it three months or six, your last little bit o' trouble? My memory is so bad!"

Suspected

Freddy had no retort for this quite unfounded charge of imprudence; he was for temptuous silence. He repeated his question, but his air of jauntiness was more forced.

"My friend, Mr. John Herries—"

"My private opinion is," said the clerk, with much deliberation, who had a small reputation for sarcasm to live up to, and saw the eyes of the waiter and elevator boy beat expectantly upon him, "is, first, that there isn't any such man, or will be any such person as Mr. John Herries; second, and lastly, that if there was he wouldn't be here, because his mark would be nearer the Bowery—if he was a friend of yours; and finally, that if there was such a person and he did happen to be here he'd be out to see you in forty jiffys. I don't know if I've made myself understood."

The elevator boy, at least, seemed to think that he had, for he chuckled up in an ecstasy of joy. Freddy turned on his heel, gathering the rags of dignity he could still muster round him, and walked out, past the two smirking attendants in livery, and on the pavement relieved his injured feelings by a vigorous exhibition, which did not seem to do much toward restoring his self-complacency.

However, he had no intention of letting this retreat interfere with his plan. He went to a second hotel, to receive the curt intimation that no one of the name of Herries was known there.

Freddy felt in his pockets; he still had the greater part of the money he had extracted from Graithain.

"I'll take a cab—they'll be more civil if they see me a cab waiting—and go from hotel to hotel till I find them," he said to himself savagely. "Once I run him to earth, I'll jolly well come to an understanding—straight to Mulberry Bend, that reward!" Either way I'm sure of a bit of "stuff."

He hailed a cab and told the driver to take him to the Hotel Bourbon. He had chosen a four-wheeler in preference to a hansom; as it drove off he tore off his coat and tried to smake some of the dust off it—rather a feat to such limited accommodation; he rubbed as much of the mud off his boots as he could on the cushions of the opposite seat, which doubtless would have pleased the cabman very much, if he had known.

A Strange Meeting

The Bourbon is a palatial hotel, with two entrances in different streets; telling the cabman to wait, Freddy tripped up the steps into the hotel, and glanced into the lounge on the left, but the question with much dignity and firmness.

He glanced up once, then went on writing for a moment or two, then again contemplated with a dreamy eye the somewhat loud check in Freddy's clothes.

Mr. Delamere repeated his question with added firmness.

"Kindly answer me, as my cab is waiting. I suppose you heard what I said?"

"Yes? Oh, I was wondering if I was my move," the clerk murmured, in palpable reference to the chessboard-like pattern of the paved, with a wink to one of the hotel attendants near him. "You've got to the wrong place—you want the Salvation Army Night Shelter."

Mr. Delamere went scarlet with anger. This was too much. He could hardly articulate for his rage.

"Look here, my jack-in-office," he cried, furiously, "you may think you're here to be impertinent to your betters, but fortunately I have some influence with the directorate of this hotel, and—"

He stopped abruptly in his speech.

He forgot his anger, forgot the gratuitous rudeness of the man he was addressing, his whole soul was absorbed.

On the threshold of the entrance opposite to that by which he had himself come in stood the man about whom he was inquiring, Herries and Olga Vail were engrossed in each other, and his eyes and the eyes of the newcomers met.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

TRY ONCE MORE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a man of twenty-five and am deeply in love with a young girl of seventeen. I have reason to believe my love is reciprocated. Her family recently moved to quite a distance from our home town. Shortly before she moved away I tried to meet her and declare my love, but for some reason or other she avoided me. I then wrote her that I had loved her for a long time, but received no reply, and am feeling very much disheartened. I would like to have you advise me as to whether it would be proper for me to make any further advances. It seems so hard to give her up.

I THINK you might write her once more. Write to her and tell her that you are writing for advice and that you feel you will not answer your letter, and at least give you the satisfaction of an answer of some kind. Tell her that you have written to her once before, and that you have received no reply, and ask her if she received your letter. If she pays no attention to your letter, there is nothing to do but give her up.

RATHER SHORT ACQUAINTANCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About a month ago I was introduced to a young lady about twenty-three years of age, and have learned to love her. As I am contemplating marriage, do you think our acquaintance has been short enough? I am twenty-two years of age, earning a good salary, and think I can furnish a home very comfortably. G. W.

A MONTH is rather a short acquaintanceship on which to become engaged. Wait until you have known her a little longer, and then you will be more sure of yourself and her.

Secrets About Yourself

EACH ear has four bones.

The human skull contains thirty bones.

The breast bone of each is hollow on the back.

The body has altogether about five hundred muscles.

Every hair has two oil glands situated at its base.

The globe of the eye is moved by six muscles.

The human skeleton, exclusive of teeth, consists of 208 bones.

Hair is very strong. A single hair will bear a weight of 1,150 grains.

The roots of the hair penetrate the skin about one-twelfth of an inch.

Straight hairs are nearly cylindrical; curly hairs are elliptical or flat.

One hundred and thirty-seven million cells are in the lungs, which would cover a surface thirty times greater than the entire human body.

The brain is supposed to contain over 200,000,000 cells, in which thought works out problems.

USEFUL AND DAINTY BAGS

THERE are few things that offer more variety in sorts and sizes and in the number of uses for which they are designed than bags, and few things give greater scope and play to the ingenuity of womankind.

First of all is the Powder Rag. This is an article which almost every one owns, and yet how many have a pretty one? Take one piece of white silk, satin, velvet or even skeins of gold colored embroidery silk; with a moderate size needle crochet first one row in plain stitch, then one row of star stitch, repeating over and over again, until the piece is the size you wish. Make another the same size and sew the crochet to the edges of three sides together, working in shell stitch all around the bag thus formed and when finished run a ribbon in the top, leaving enough to tie into a bow. Procure in the form of each star stitch; then run a crocheted line of the silk all around the outside edge of the border and finish with a cord and tassels of the silk and zephyr. Into this bag slip the plain bag of flannel and draw up and tie the cord and you have a dainty little present which is always acceptable.

Second, the Darning Bag. This is something every mother will appreciate. You can give nothing more acceptable than a receptacle for all the socks and stockings as they are brought in from the wash, where they may be safe and convenient of access. This is made of cretonne, requiring one and one-half yards. One yard and a quarter is cut of and hemmed at both ends. Then each side is gathered and caught about nine inches apart, and a piece of pasteboard cut and covered with cretonne. One-half dozen inches square is then sewed to the edge of each end of the bag, which is then ready to hang it up by. If you like, the pasteboard on one side may be double and in between you may put white flannel cut in the same shape to receive the needles.

Third, comes the Work Bag. This is only designed for fancy work, and is made by taking a piece of flannel or cloth and cutting out of it four pieces fourteen inches long and about five or six inches broad; point these sections at one end in this shape, and with a pinking machine or some little scissors cut the points of the one for whom it is intended. Line each piece with flannel of the color of the silk used to embroider it and sew together as a bag. Run a ribbon drawstring about an inch and a half from the top, leaving room enough to tie into a bow of the same ribbon on the point at the bottom, and your work bag is done.

Fourth, the final "fifth" Bag. This may be made of cretonne or prettier still of colored flannel and ornamented. One piece of cloth about fifteen inches long and six wide, pointed at the top and straight across the bottom. A second piece of cloth is cut the same width and about four inches shorter, but square at both ends.

Sew these two pieces together at the bottom and sides and bind them with ribbon or braid; bind each separately across the top and leave open to slip the dust rag in. A large brass ring at the top and smaller ones across the bottom give a neat finish.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MAY 19, 1906

A Busybody and the Salvation Army

The World Would Be Better Off If There Were More Salvation Armies and Fewer Busybodies

Some gentleman conscientiously engaged in not attending to his own business has attacked the Salvation Army and its charitable work.

The basis of the attack seems to be the failure of the Salvation Army to supply this gentleman with a detailed statement of its receipts and expenditures.

The person, it seems, would like to know just exactly how many dollars the Salvation Army collects for charity and just exactly what it does with each dollar.

We do not mention the name of the Salvation Army's critic. We prefer to have him do without the notoriety. But as an implied slander against the Salvation Army has been spread broadcast, this newspaper is very glad to reply to it.

The good the Salvation Army does in this world cannot possibly be computed in dollars and cents. Those best able to judge can testify that every penny which charity gives through the Salvation Army is spent for charity and spent wisely.

The hungry thousands fed by the Army tell the story of money spent.

Other thousands clothed, housed and helped in endless ways materially testify to the wise spending of money by the Salvation Army management.

The great work of the Salvation Army, as of all sincere religious movements, is far above money, far above the material plane.

At night, with the world dark and no hope in sight, how many a wretched woman has been stopped on her way to the river and turned in the right direction by a woman of the Salvation Army?

How many drunkards have been turned from the saloon toward home by the men and women of that Army?

Every newspaper reporter can testify to the work that the Salvation Army does. Where men unarmed are afraid to go you will find the Salvation Army women earnestly at work, protected only by the severe dress of the Army, with a purpose that is clear and holy even to the most depraved man or woman.

The Salvation Army has stimulated hope, good resolutions, belief in this life and in another life among millions of human beings.

It has stimulated the charitable impulse among thousands.

The man who slanderously questions or criticizes such an organization, who fails in appreciation of the work freely done by such loyal, devoted workers, might better look into his OWN conscience and motives and ask himself how good an account he can give of either.

Can Rich Men KEEP Money Stolen from the People?

That Question Is on Trial—A Simple and Interesting One

In New York City a number of workingmen have sued to recover $1,685 stolen from them.

This money was STOLEN; and it was bet on the race tracks with bookmakers.

These bets were made IN VIOLATION OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE.

The men that got the money at first hand were the bookmakers. THE MEN THAT ACTUALLY PROFITED BY IT MOST WERE THE RICE RACE-TRACK OWNERS and others seeking the excitement and profits of racing.

A good many men of small means are interested in this suit. And ALL the inhabitants of the country are interested in it also.

There is no doubt whatever that the money was stolen from the workingmen who bring the suit.

There is no doubt that this stolen money was given to bookmakers —WHO ARE ALL LAWBREAKERS—and that part of the money was given by the bookmakers to the rich men that own the race tracks, who are also lawbreakers, accessories to crime.

In this suit August Belmont, the president of the Jockey Club; James R. Keene and others are made defendants.

The decision in this case cannot fail to interest all American citizens. For the question is extremely simple and plain.

It is this: CAN A RICH MAN KEEP STOLEN MONEY, WHICH HE HAS RECEIVED THROUGH CRIMINALS, FROM THE POCKETS OF POOR MEN?

We all know that if the workingmen had received sixteen hundred and eighty-five dollars stolen from August Belmont, and handed to the holders BY CRIMINALS, those men would have to give the money back promptly.

It is certain that if an ordinary little criminal kept a little gambling establishment in a basement, and if he took in sixteen hundred and eighty-five dollars STOLEN FROM AUGUST BELMONT, any court would very quickly force the little gambling house keeper to give back the money.

The interesting question is this:

Will a court which would compel the keeper of a small gambling dive to return money to August Belmont compel August Belmont and his race-track associates, who keep a BIG gambling dive, to return the stolen money spent in their dive?

Our Misguided Heroes

By James J. Montague

Secretary Shaw says there is no future for a boy who works for Uncle Sam.

MISGUIDED youths who want to serve the old United States
Should study law or counter jump, for that way glory waits.
For Shaw, that grand and great old man, that master of finance,
Says boys who work for Uncle Sam will never have a chance;
So let the youngsters earnestly hunt up some good vocation,
And not put in long, sad years in working for the nation.

IF John Paul Jones and Farragut and Dewey had not fought
Before this much-inspired creed by Mr. Shaw was taught
They might have made distinguished names as clerks in grocery stores,
Instead of putting in their time in fighting foolish wars.
Too bad they didn't learn the truth from Shaw's redundant lips,
Before they flew the Stars and Stripes from bruised and battered ships!

ALAS, that Grant was born too soon to hear said Shaw proclaim
That serving poor old Uncle Sam is not the way to fame!
He might have still been tanning hides within a reeking tank,
And possibly, like Shaw, he might have run a country bank.
But Shaw came forth from Iowa too late by many a year
To tear away the shoulder straps that blasted Grant's career.

AND luckless, hapless Washington, he never, never, knew
That toiling for one's countrymen was not the thing to do;
But who can blame the poor old man? There were no financiers
In those benighted, simple days to map out men's careers;
And so he wasted all his gifts before the world e'er saw
Or heard of theories like that of Secretary Shaw.

MR. E. Z. MARK PAYS A REWARD

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

1. STRANGER—Is this Mr. Mark? Mr. Mark, I called in reference to this ad. in the paper: LOST —A dark seal skin pocketbook, with cards, Mrs. E. Z. Mark, inside; also three hundred dollars in cash. Finder will receive fifty dollars reward if returned to office of Mr. E. Z. Mark.

2. STRANGER—Now, Mr. Mark, I found the pocketbook, and here it is. The cards are there and the three hundred dollars is intact.
MR. E. Z.—Thank you, sir. My wife must have dropped it on her way to the bank. Here is the fifty dollars reward, sir.

3. MR. E. Z.—Gee whiz! If Mary isn't the most reckless, careless woman I ever heard tell of. Here she goes and loses a pocketbook containing three hundred dollars, advertises it and never says a word to me about it. Oh, I'll give her a piece of my mind when I get home.

4. MR. E. Z.—I'll just take a look into it. Ye gods! What's THIS! Nothing but a roll of green wrapping paper! Great Scott! I see it all! Mary never lost this pocketbook. That ad. was a fake! DONE AGAIN!

Bostonians Should Take a Deeper Interest in the Splendid Work of the Animal Rescue League

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

ALL Boston people with hearts know of the wonderful work done by Mrs. Huntington Smith, with her Animal Rescue League, No. 51 Carver street.

In her annual report Mrs. Smith says:

In our first report, issued February, 1900, we give a record of 2,205 animals received.

The record for 1901 was 5,131; for 1902, 7,759; for 1903, 9,544; for 1904, 13,161; for 1905, 15,781. During the year just closed we have received 17,886, and still there are men and women coming to the league every week who have only just found out that there is a shelter to which homeless animals, or animals that must soon be homeless if no moor is opened to receive them, can be carried.

Of the 17,886 animals received during the last year there were 8,143 cats and 6,307 kittens, making a total of 14,440 cats and kittens.

Three thousand three hundred and twenty-six dogs were cared for; and besides these animals there were brought to us for various reasons, either to be relieved from suffering by merciful death or with a hope of placing them in homes, forty birds, including six pigeons and two parrots, forty-three white mice and white rats, fourteen guinea pigs, nine rabbits and four squirrels.

We have also bought sixty-two old or disabled horses that the law could not take from their owners and had them mercifully killed. During the year, 696 dogs and 649 cats and kittens, making a total of 1,345 animals were placed in good homes.

Educational Work

BUT this is a small part of the work done by this league. Its most important work is educational, "Bands of Mercy," "Kindness Clubs" and organizations which develop the minds of children along the lines of sympathy and protection for weaker things, have been the main interest of this good woman.

It is to be hoped that in all the other cities of our great American good women will be found to undertake the organization of kindness clubs.

The club has a president, secretary and treasurer, selected by the organizer first, and each year afterward elected by the members.

After the meeting is formally opened each member relates some act of mercy and kindness he or she has been able to perform during the week. Not only acts of kindness to animals, but to human beings. One little boy reported that "he had helped mother."

Others report picking up a blanket which had fallen from a shivering animal and replacing it. Another picking up broken glass and old tin cans from the street to save the feet of horses.

Others, it is to be hoped, tell of giving tired people with bundles seats in cars and stages; of assisting cripples and blind people over the streets, and of saying a kindly word to the poor and decrepit and deformed, instead of staring them out of countenance, as so many children, supposed to be well reared, continually do.

Mrs. Smith reports the remark of one mother, which is full of significance. "Now, that my children are grown," she said, "I see the great mistake I made in not teaching them to be thoughtful and kind. It is the most necessary virtue on earth, but is rarely taught in churches in any way to impress it upon the minds of the young."

I am happy in the receipt of a letter from that good young woman, Miss Ida Sheehan of No. 214 Park place, Brooklyn, N. Y., which says: "My sister, who is as fond of animals as I, wishes, after a time, to have a home built for homeless animals, and the family and I favor the plan. It will be situated somewhere in Brooklyn."

Miss Ida Sheehan originated the Ida Medal, which has been presented to two men already in Brooklyn as a testimonial of their humanity as drivers.

The Ida Medal

SHE intends to present this medal twice each year to such men as she and her agents prove to be humane in the hard position of drivers through crowded city streets.

Following her example, I have ordered three of the "Ida Medals," which I am sending to the only three humane drivers I found in Jamaica, W. I.

Some one asked Mrs. Smith if her "kindness club" was not calculated to make children egotistical and vainglorious.

She replied: "If I can teach children to glory in doing good deeds, I am willing they should become a bit vain."

If you want to help make the growing generation better, write to Mrs. Smith at the address given above, send her an addressed and stamped envelope and ask her how you can start a kindness club in your own town.

Write also to Stella J. Preston, Secretary, the New York State Humane Education Committee, Albany, N. Y., and learn of its work. It has existed only a year, but Miss Preston reports:

Several newspapers throughout the State have conducted, under the direction of the committee, humane clubs for children, inviting them through the papers to sign the pledge, "I will try to be kind to all harmless living creatures and protect them from cruel usage."

Hundreds of children have been prompted to write stories and letters on humane subjects to these papers, and thousands have joined these separate clubs. When we consider that these appeals have touched the heart of the ruling generation the good accomplished is inestimable.

See if you cannot do something to help this work along. It means regeneration for the world.
